FIVE MINUTE passing periods are synonymous with long, windy walks. Units of the new school are to be connected in cellular fashion with enclosed, glass corridors.

SARDINE PACKING is at the height of fashion throughout the halls and stairways.

1960 Students Attack One Year

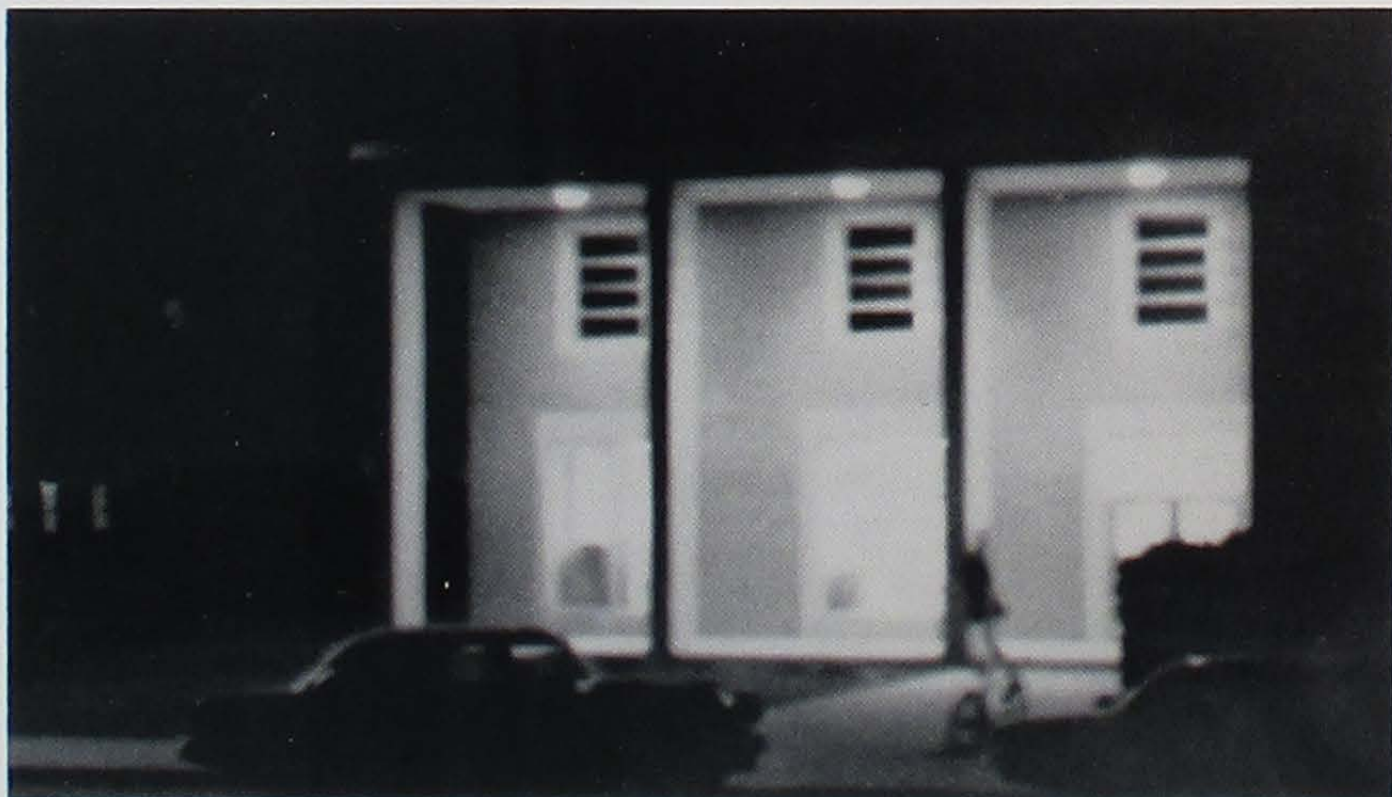

Situated at the edge of an Iowa corn field on a 74 acre site are the first three units of Ames' new multi-million dollar high school.

In 1960 the first unit was completed; and this year's seniors, then sophomores, joined the student body. The following years were characterized by a split school system. Half the student body attended the old high school building while the other half went to classes two miles away in the new unit. At noon the classes switched schools by way of crowded, daily bus rides.

Those days were crammed with impromptu situations. On the first day of school in sixty, a traffic jam developed on the temporary dirt road leading to the new high school; and students had to walk to the school over unsodded hills. In class it was no less hectic; teachers had to scream to be heard over the road grading equipment. With winter the school was occasionally snowed-in and students frozen out.

The problems of today were no less eminent. This year we were without a gym and an auditorium. However, administrative and student ingenuity have solved many immediate problems.

THE SITE of the new high school at night is the picture of peacefulness.

DAYBREAK was blown in morning after morning as the band rehearsed for its half time shows.

Offering many rich and varied fields of extra-curricular activities, our high school has enabled its students to develop their interests and talents in all their facets. Most Ames students participate in two or three of these rewarding activities during the year.

Some of these organizations provided entertainment for the city of Ames as well as the school. Our excellent dramatics department presented three major plays this year, and the vocal music department organized concerts for the holidays, Friendship Week and other events. The orchestra and band provided programs and entertainment for all students. Much hard work and consistent practice went into these performances.

Among the other organized activities are debate club, science seminar, and the language clubs. In debate, the club members traveled and competed with other schools. The various language groups also provided entertainment for interested participants. All these activities are worthwhile, and each student was encouraged to learn about them, decide which ones interested him, and join.

Ames High offers the student one of the finest academic programs in the country. High national ranking in merit scholarship tests and in the Iowa Tests of Educational Development indicates the outstanding scholarship of Ames High students. In the 1961-1962 school year, the Iowa Tests of Educational Development showed that the school average ranks in the 99th percentile in almost all areas of testing.

A fine faculty and up-to-date courses furnish an excellent learning situation for students of all abilities. Programs in vocational education are provided to help the student make career choices and receive valuable job experience. This year a series of honors courses were instituted, which provided an opportunity for students with exceptional ability to go beyond the normal scope of a class. Students could apply for up to two classes in the honors program; applications were judged on past performance and teachers' recommendations. The honors sections included biology, sophomore English, American literature, physics, algebra, and chemistry.

Special equipment is provided to help the teacher. Some of the many teaching aids in the new high school include a language laboratory, well-equipped science labs, and other various visual and audio equipment.

FURIOUS CHEERS of the Pep Club led the sports fans in stadium rumbling hysterics.

ROARING FANS followed the cheer leaders in a pep assembly on one of the mounds which surround the parking lot.

The Little Cyclone teams, well-known throughout the state for the lively support of their fans, have earned their triumphs. At home games the stadium or the gym was filled to capacity with enthusiastic fans; for out-of-town games, Cyclone followers left Ames on game night with boundless pep and energy.

This spirit of loyalty was evident not only at games, but also throughout the school during the week before the games. Cheerleaders, in an effort to keep the enthusiasm high, initiated the idea of reading original poems about forthcoming games over the loud speaker during morning announcements. Pep assemblies were held as often as possible on the eve of a game, and during the noon hour ten-minute pep rallies were held outside the school on one of the mounds surrounding the parking area. The pep club, composed of interested senior girls, helped the cheerleaders plan the pep assemblies. "Pep" skits depicting scenes from the coming game were presented, and signs and posters were placed conspicuously throughout the halls reminding everyone of the game.

It was this spirit of loyalty and enthusiasm displayed by the fans and the spirit of fair play shown by our teams that made our school what it is this year and what it has been.

Features

Making student life more enjoyable were many indispensable highlights. It is unlikely that any documentary could relate all the experiences of a complex mass of nearly 1,000 enthusiastic students; but the following major activities and pastimes are a representative norm:

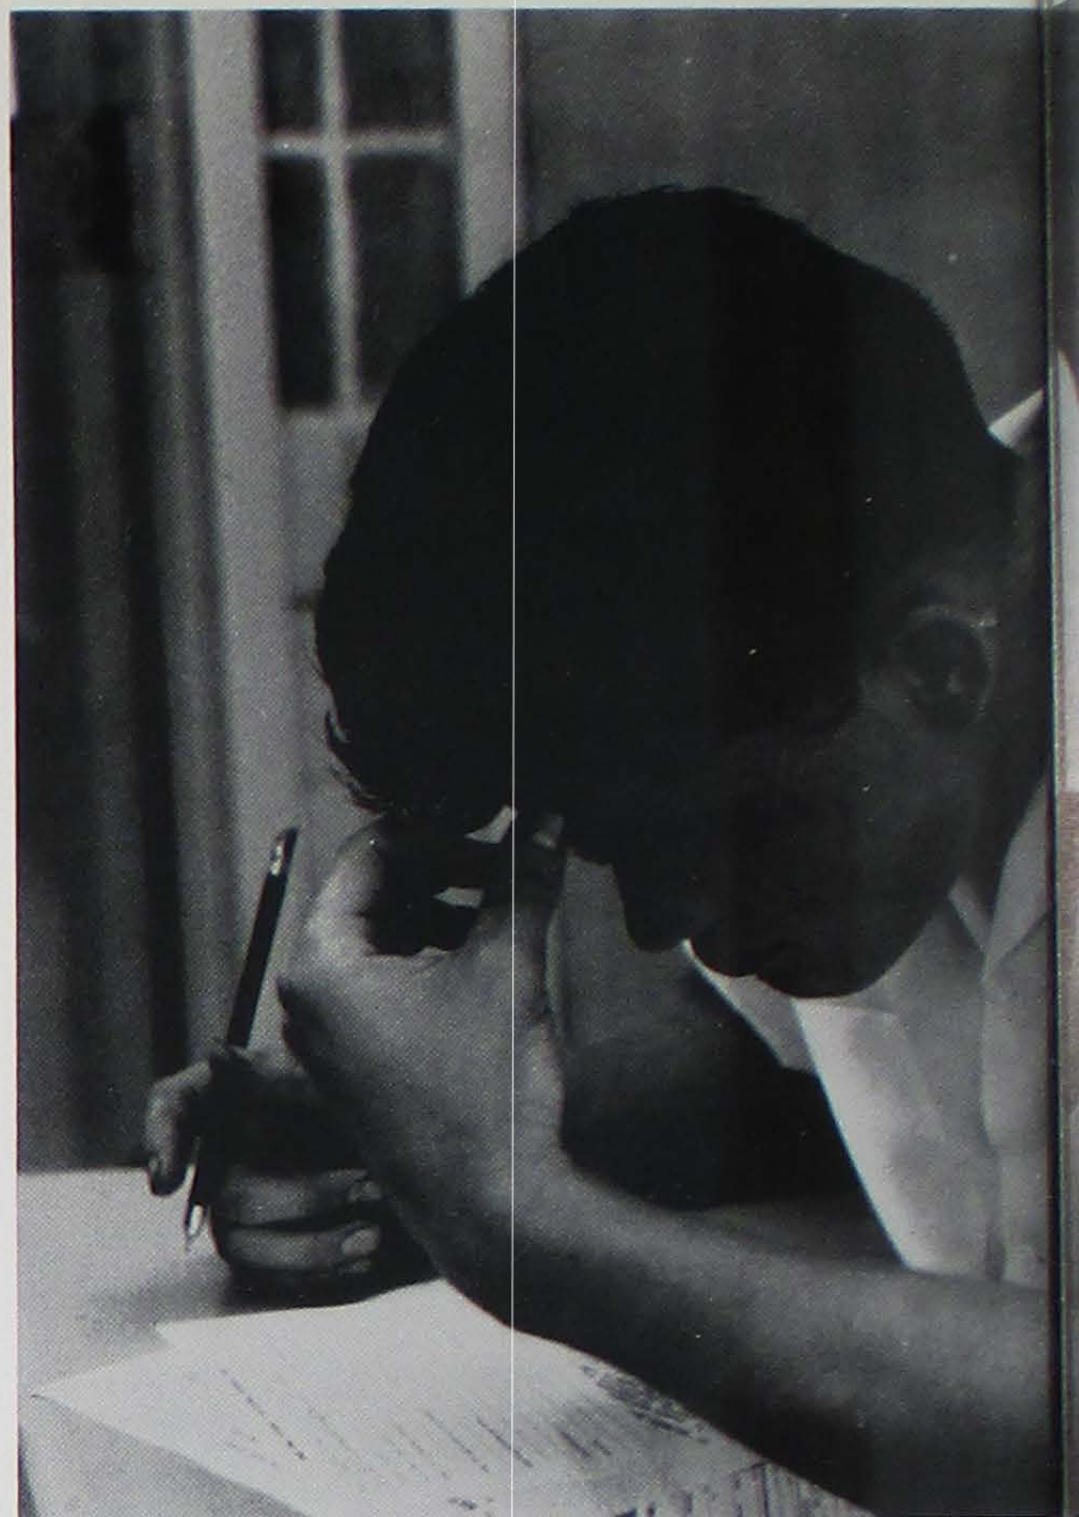

- Enrollment—a new, united school
- Homecoming
- Career and College Nights
- Assemblies
- “Teens Against Polio”
- Court Day
- Christmas Formal
- Campaigns
- Spirit Dance
- Friendship Week
- Foreign students; student exchange
- Boys’ and Girls’ State

With a year full of planned and spontaneous highlights, each of us was pulled into an uproarious and hectic life, beyond that of the school.

On three days in August, 914 students registered, filled out questionnaires, received information, and were given their schedules. Activity centered around the office in new unit two.

A new feature of the preparatory activities was "Sophomore Orientation," held on the Friday following registration. The program began with an informal assembly in the study hall, which included a talk by Principal Adams and an introduction to the student leaders. The sophomores then spent ten minutes in each of their classes getting to know their teachers. A mixer in the study hall followed the "preview day," giving students and teachers a chance to become better acquainted.

With the beginning of school, the faculty and administration found that registration wasn't over yet. Late enrollment, last minute schedule changes, and the rush to buy milk tickets added to the first day turmoil. By the end of the week though, the students had fallen into their normal routines, and the school was regaining some resemblance to normalcy.

PONDERING registration forms was Gary DeMoss in the seniors' preschool enrollment.

This year, the library is occupying what will later become the study hall. The library staff has tried to make the best of the situation and has managed to provide an excellent place for students to study and read. Much new equipment has been bought including ten individual study tables, several lounge chairs, and 115 straight-backed chairs. Over 260 new books ranging in price from $1 to $17.50 and 140 paperbacks have been purchased.

Due to lack of a cafeteria, this year's students were required to either bring their lunch or eat at home. Many preferred to bring their lunch, and the study hall and the library were opened at noon to furnish them with a place to eat. The school did sell milk, for which tickets with 5 or 25 punches were sold, at three cents a punch. Students took care of the milk sales and cleaning the study hall after lunch.

Highlight 1962 Homecoming Dance

Bus loads of band members, fans, and a top rated team from West Waterloo rolled into Ames on the night of October 12 for the long awaited Homecoming game between the Wahawks and the Ames High Little Cyclones. Knowing at best they had an outside chance to win, the Little Cyclones tossed in their best game of the season and fought to the end before bowing in defeat, 14-0.

The music of the J. Hall Four with the songs of Janet Wildman filled the study hall later in the evening as the students and alums gathered for the Homecoming Dance 1962. Cornstalks, pumpkins, and the school colors of black and orange were used by the Social Committee to carry out the Indian Summer theme and transform the study hall into a dance floor.

Members of homeroom 118-1 served soft drinks and doughnuts in the basement to those who wandered down. Ping-pong games were a rousing source of entertainment from nine-thirty to eleven. Homeroom 112-1 was in charge of publicity for the well attended dance. Weeks of work by various Student Council, homeroom, and Pep Club committees were climaxed in the Homecoming '62 festivities.

ATTENDANT BECKY Von Bergen, Queen Jane Coletti, and Attendant Ann Wilson were introduced to the football enthusiasts after entering the stadium in bright convertibles.

AMES HIGH'S JANET Wildman sang with the J. Hall Four to entertain guests at the Homecoming Dance.

JANE COLETTI, 1962 Queen, graciously reigned over the traditional activities of Homecoming with attendants Becky Von Bergen and Ann Wilson.

Homecoming Queen elections are a complicated mess. On Tuesday of Homecoming week, the traditional announcement is made that each student should write the senior girl's name of his choice on a slip of paper. After a harried counting of the ballots, the eight to twelve girls with the highest number of nominations became candidates. From the time that their names are announced late Tuesday the suspense mounted.

Thursday morning the second voting took place, and the candidates could once again become human. Friday morning the Homecoming Assembly was held—tradition ends there; each year the ceremony is different. For '62 a short pep rally was held. This was followed by numerous pep talks and the introduction of the varsity football team.

Tom Grabau and Butch Mickelson took the honors of naming the queen, Jane Coletti, and her attendants, Becky Von Bergen and Ann Wilson. The Homecoming Royalty was introduced to the football crowd later Friday evening and then honored at the dance.

Festivities

Career, College, School Nights

CAREER NIGHT SPEAKER Mr. Kelso explains his field of electronics and tells his listeners of its pros and cons.

On the evening of November 20th the student body met in the Central Junior High Auditorium for the opening of Career Night. This program enabled the student to receive "first hand" information on the career of his choice. It was organized by the Career Day Committee of the Student Council, headed by Ricky Lloyd.

Career Night 1962 opened with an address entitled "And the Tide Rolls On" by Dr. Virgil Lagonmarcino, Director of Teacher Training at ISU. At the conclusion of the address, the students spent two 55 minute periods in small groups with representatives from any of forty chosen fields.

As a feature of Education Week, Ames High invited the parents to visit classrooms on "Back to School Night." Each student attended his morning classes with his parents as observers. The program enabled parents to see the progressing school, experience the noon traffic jam, and view the abnormally large classes. This event was reinstated after the split school, two year transition period.

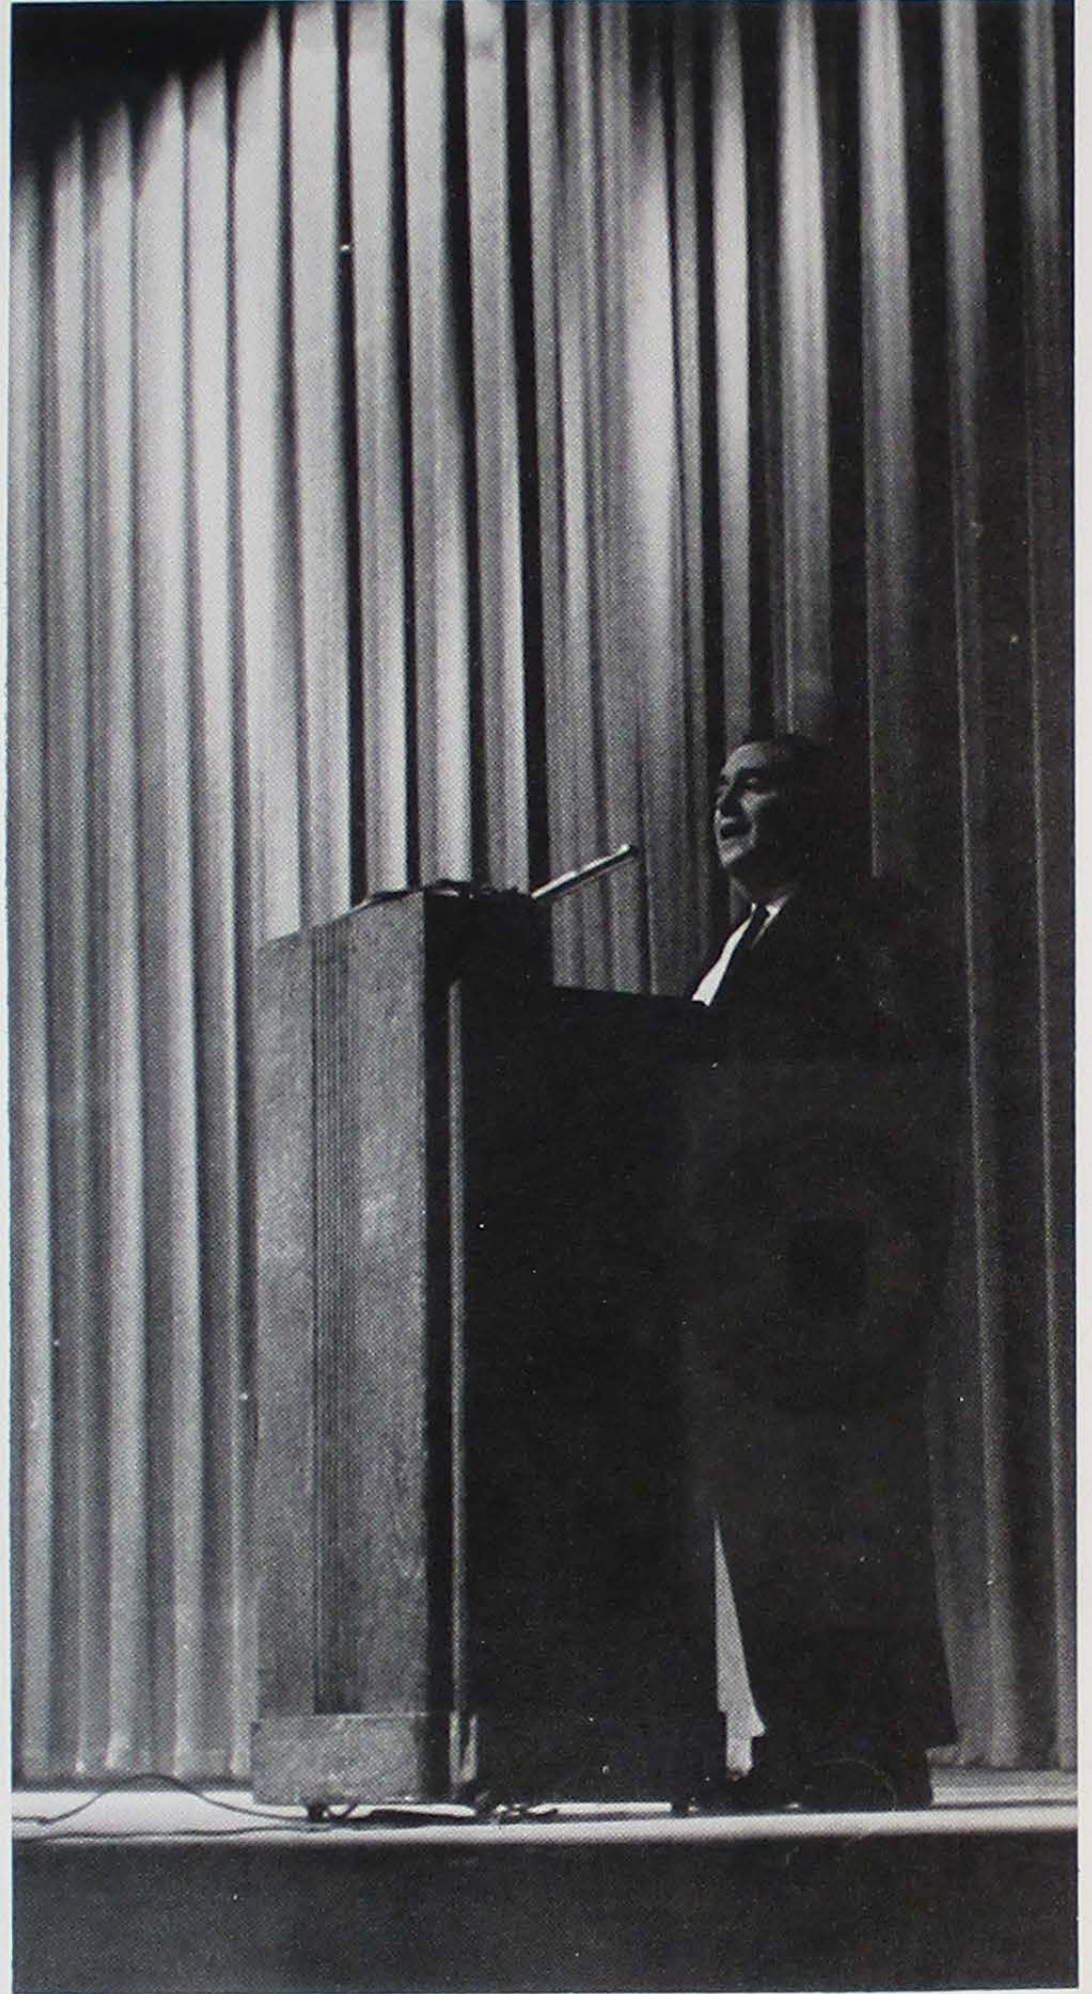

Later in the year, students wishing information about higher education were invited to attend College Night. This provided an opportunity to meet and talk with representatives from many surrounding colleges and national universities.

DR. VIRGIL LAGOMARCINO spoke to the Career Night assembly on their future education and vocations.

JOYCE DICKSON helped serve refreshments at "Back to School Night." Instead of attending regular study halls, students brought their parents to the basement for punch and prattle.

WITH THE LIGHTS DIM and the audience hushed, Archie Greene sang a lullaby accompanied by Jane Riggs at the Christmas program. Other soloists for the yuletide concert were Janet Wildman and Nancy Uhl.

Although the closest auditorium was nearly two miles away, the Assembly Committee, under the leadership of chairman Bob Beaty, proceeded undaunted to organize several fine programs during the year. The student body made the mass migration to the Central Junior High Auditorium with a surprising lack of confusion, considering the situation. A fleet of buses and untold numbers of cars provided the transportation to and from the programs.

The first item on the calendar was a talent show. Ames High's future Broadway stars were given free reign to display their talents onstage. The show had many acts including pianists, vocalists, a short skit by the Drama Club, and the by now famous "Culture Club." Bob Beaty, as master of ceremonies, provided an interesting diversion in a costume that defied description.

The next program was a talk by Johnny Boyd, champion race driver, and a movie about the "Indianapolis 500." Mr. Boyd spoke about his experiences and their relation to safe driving.

Other assemblies during the year included election and pep rallies and a program on the works of James Whitcomb Riley.

WILLING Teens Against Polio workers assign districts to the 200 students who signed up to canvass Ames. Boys' Club and Girl Reserves jointly sponsor this service project each year.

Every year Ames High seniors have the opportunity to get an inside view of the Iowa Court system in action. On February 6 in the County Courthouse at Nevada, the senior class participated in a mock trial as both jurymen and spectators. After the entrance of District Court Justice, Ed J. Kelley, the trial began. A civil case involving an auto accident in which the plaintiff was suing the defendant for damages was presented by members of the Story County Bar Association. The question for the student jury was whether such negligence was the direct cause of the damages to the plaintiff's automobile. After hearing all the evidence and retiring for a short period of deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. From this experience the seniors gained valuable insight into court procedure and our judicial system.

AHS Students Raise Money for TAP

A great number of Ames High students participated in community service projects during the year. On Halloween Eve, while younger children went “trick or treating” for cookies and candy, high school students went from door to door asking for money to support UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund). The project, carried out by individual church youth groups in their areas, was coordinated by the Ames UCYM (United Christian Youth Movement) Council. As a result of the night's work, $1500 was collected which will go to clothe and feed starving children in the world's under-developed countries.

On January 31, Ames High students took part in the annual Teens Against Polio Drive in an effort to collect money for research on birth defects and arthritis. Girl Reserves and Boys' Club, headed by Jane Coletti and Rick Lloyd, sponsored and organized the entire project. About 200 students collected money totaling $2,330, the largest amount collected in the history of the Ames drive. Donation boxes were placed in the homerooms and downtown stores; envelopes were sent to all Ames residents asking for contributions; and a house-to-house drive was organized to complete the campaign.

Snow didn't fall until Christmas Eve this year, but by the end of the first week in December students were heading towards Lake Lavern, Squaw Creek, and Brookside with their ice skates for the first of the winter sports. With the snow came tobogganing, snowball fights, stalled cars, sidewalks to shovel, and cold north winds.

Accompanying winter came the Christmas season: shopping, carols at noon over the sound system, and the after-game party "Mistletoe Madness." The combined language clubs' Christmas party was held on December 11. Carols were sung in the different languages; punch and cookies were served. Girl Reserve and Boys' Club cabinets took gifts from the homerooms to the County Home on December 20. The vocal music department presented a program of Christmas music before school was dismissed.

The last of the Christmas activities was the semi-formal dance given by the Senior Girls on December 29. The Sun Room of the Memorial Union was decorated with flocked Christmas trees, glimmering stars, and sunbursts to carry out the theme "Valhalla." Dance music was provided by the J. Hall Four with Janet Wildman as vocalist. Karin Saral and Vivian Voelker served as dance co-chairmen.

COLORFUL POSTERS are easy to take down for the victor Jim Hannum and his backers, Mary Ellen Bragonier and Bill Strand.

KEEPING TIME DURING the two campaign assemblies enabled each candidate to have equal speaking time, Dan Roach and Mary Montgomery watched the clock at Friday's assembly.

To the Ames High student body there is only one thing certain in life: There will always be semester tests. They are as impossible to stop as a steam roller and produce about the same effects. Sophomores are petrified with fear; juniors are nervous and bleary eyed; and the old gray seniors calmly observe the proceedings with a philosophical attitude that usually develops into a bad case of "senior cynicism" by the end of the year.

Those with enough energy left to open their eyes found the tortuous boredom of study somewhat abated by the myriads of colorful and catchy posters which suddenly appeared announcing the beginning of the campaign for second semester student body president. Candidates were Bob Beaty, Dick Gibson, Jim Hannum, and Bill Easton.

Showers of paper airplanes, cheering students, and a barrage of fruit for one unlucky speaker marked the enthusiasm and hilarity of the nominating assembly. There was also a serious side to the evening though with each candidate presenting his ideas for improvements to be made in the event of his election. The election assembly on Friday climaxed a week of vigorous campaigning.

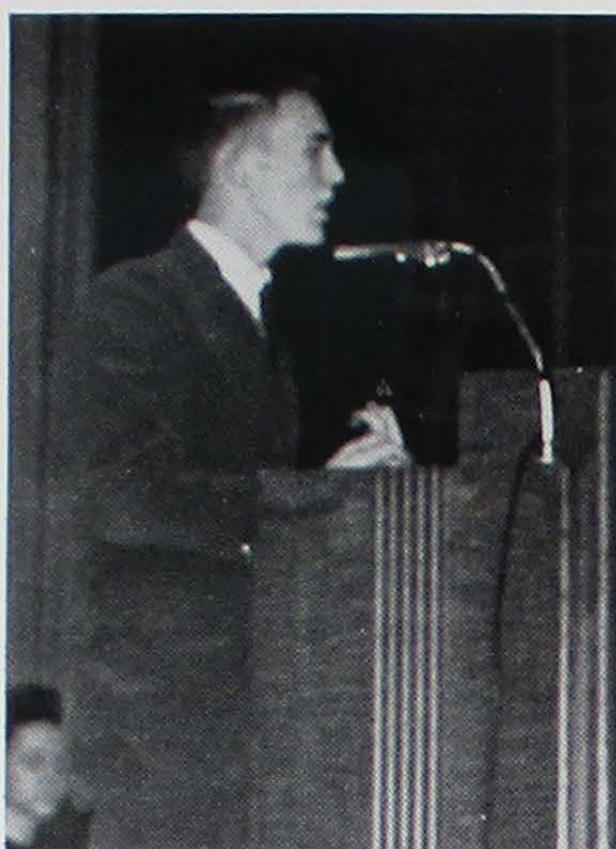

Ballots were cast, and first semester president Archie Greene announced over the sound system that Jim Hannum had been elected.

JANICE FRIEST, Spirit Sweetheart, was crowned during the semester-break dance "Carrousel" by master of ceremonies Jim Hannum after her attendants Ann Toms and Carol Rouze had been announced.

Spirited Mood for 'Carousel' Dance

High spirits following the end of semester tests combined with a carnival atmosphere made the annual Spirit dance a thoroughly enjoyable experience for all who attended. The only party poopers were the members of the Spirit staff who had spent the entire day at the monumental task of transforming the dank, dreary, junk-filled basement into a bright, wildly colored ballroom.

The theme of the dance was either "Carrousel" or "Carousel." No one was ever quite sure how it was spelled, but this did nothing to diminish the fun and excitement.

Entertainment was provided by the Junior Girls' Sextet and a junior combo. Following this, Jim Hannum, master of ceremonies, announced the "Spirit Sweetheart." The golden crown went to Janice Friest, with her attendants being Carol Rouze and Ann Toms.

Cotton candy, pink lemonade, suckers, cookies, and piles of other goodies beckoned invitingly from the refreshment tables.

By 11:35 the basement was empty and the staff was busy filling it up with junk so that it would look like itself again, but all agreed that "Carrousel" was well worth the effort.

"A WAY TO LIVE" was the subject for Dr. Wells' final lecture to the student body. Each morning the assembly included music by a choral group, devotions by an Ames minister, and introductions by officers of Boys' Club and Girl Reserves.

Beginning on February 4, the student body met at the Central Auditorium for a series of three assemblies which marked the highlight of Ames High's annual Friendship Week. Featured speaker at the assemblies was Dr. Ronald V. Wells, president of Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania. Also included among his many titles are Associate Executive Secretary of the Board of Education and Publication and Executive Director of the Division of Christian Higher Education. Addresses were on the theme "To Every Man There Openeth . . ." "A Way to God," "A Way to Love," "A Way to Live." Dr. Wells was a minister of the First Baptist Church in Ames from 1947-1952.

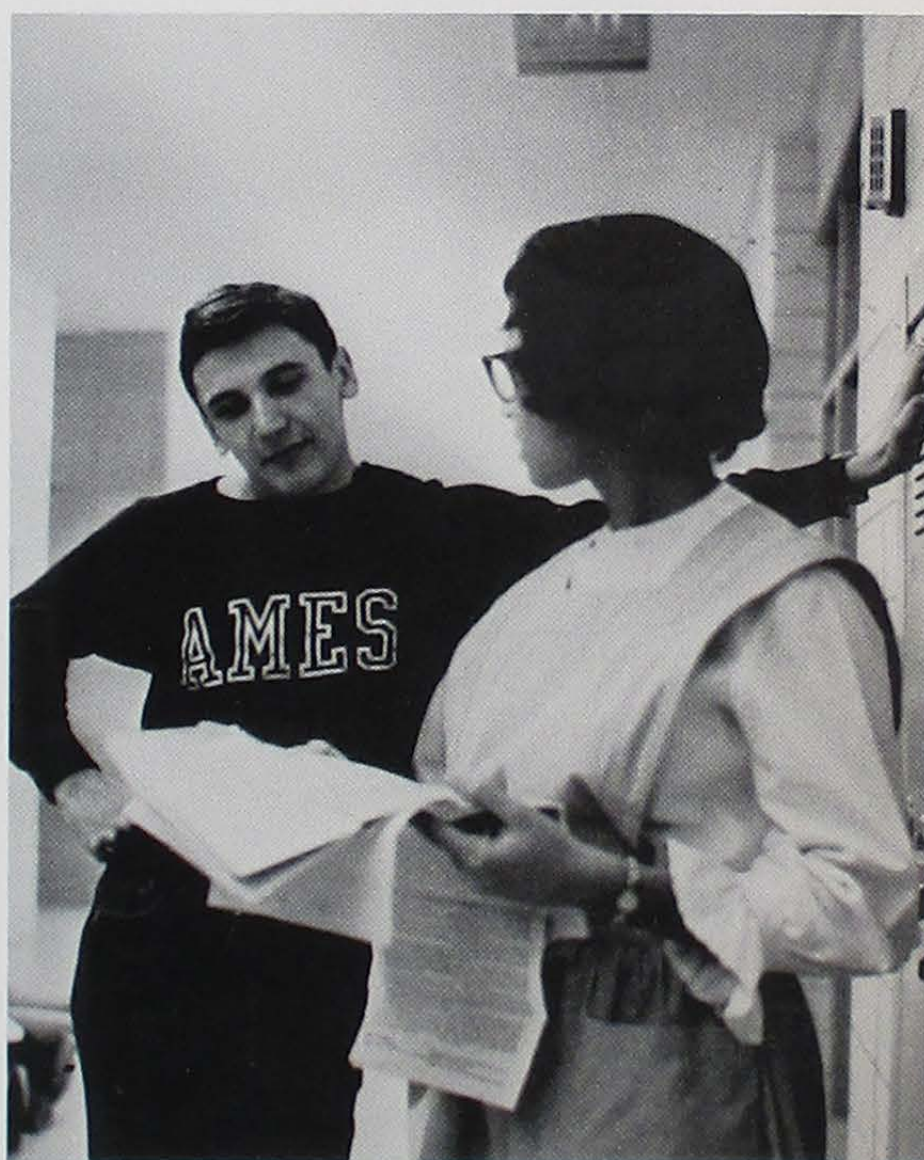

1963 Friendship Week was sponsored jointly by the Boys' Club and the Girl Reserves with the help of the Ames Rotary Club.

Friendship Week is held each winter as a time for Ames High students to learn to understand themselves and others better. Students had opportunities also for individual conferences with Dr. Wells. Each class had a forum in which it met with the speaker. In it he answered questions submitted by students through the homerooms. After the questions had been completed, the floor was opened for questions and discussion which afforded specific problems to be evaluated by a learned observer.

Sophs, Juniors Move Up; Seniors

UNIT THREE nears completion as the year closes. It will house many new classrooms and facilities for the growing school campus.

Every year when the second semester gets well underway, contests, concerts, and tournaments are scheduled to feature organizations and teams in their final performances of the year. The music department presented assemblies for the student body and concerts for the public. This year the orchestra, band, and sophomore band presented their concerts in March.

Basketball, track, tennis, and golf were all athletic highlights of the second semester. Basketball tournaments began late in February and aroused the interest of the AHS fans. The state indoor track meet was held in Iowa City on March 30. The outdoor track highlights were the Drake Relays, the Ames Invitational, and the district and state meets. Tennis and golf offered opportunities for both boys and girls. Several meets were held before the season officially ended with the state meets on May 25.

April was a busy month for the seniors as they made final preparations for their class play, for the Debate Club as they prepared for the Iowa Forensic League finals, and for the whole student body as they campaigned and elected a Student Body President for the first semester of the '63-'64 school year.

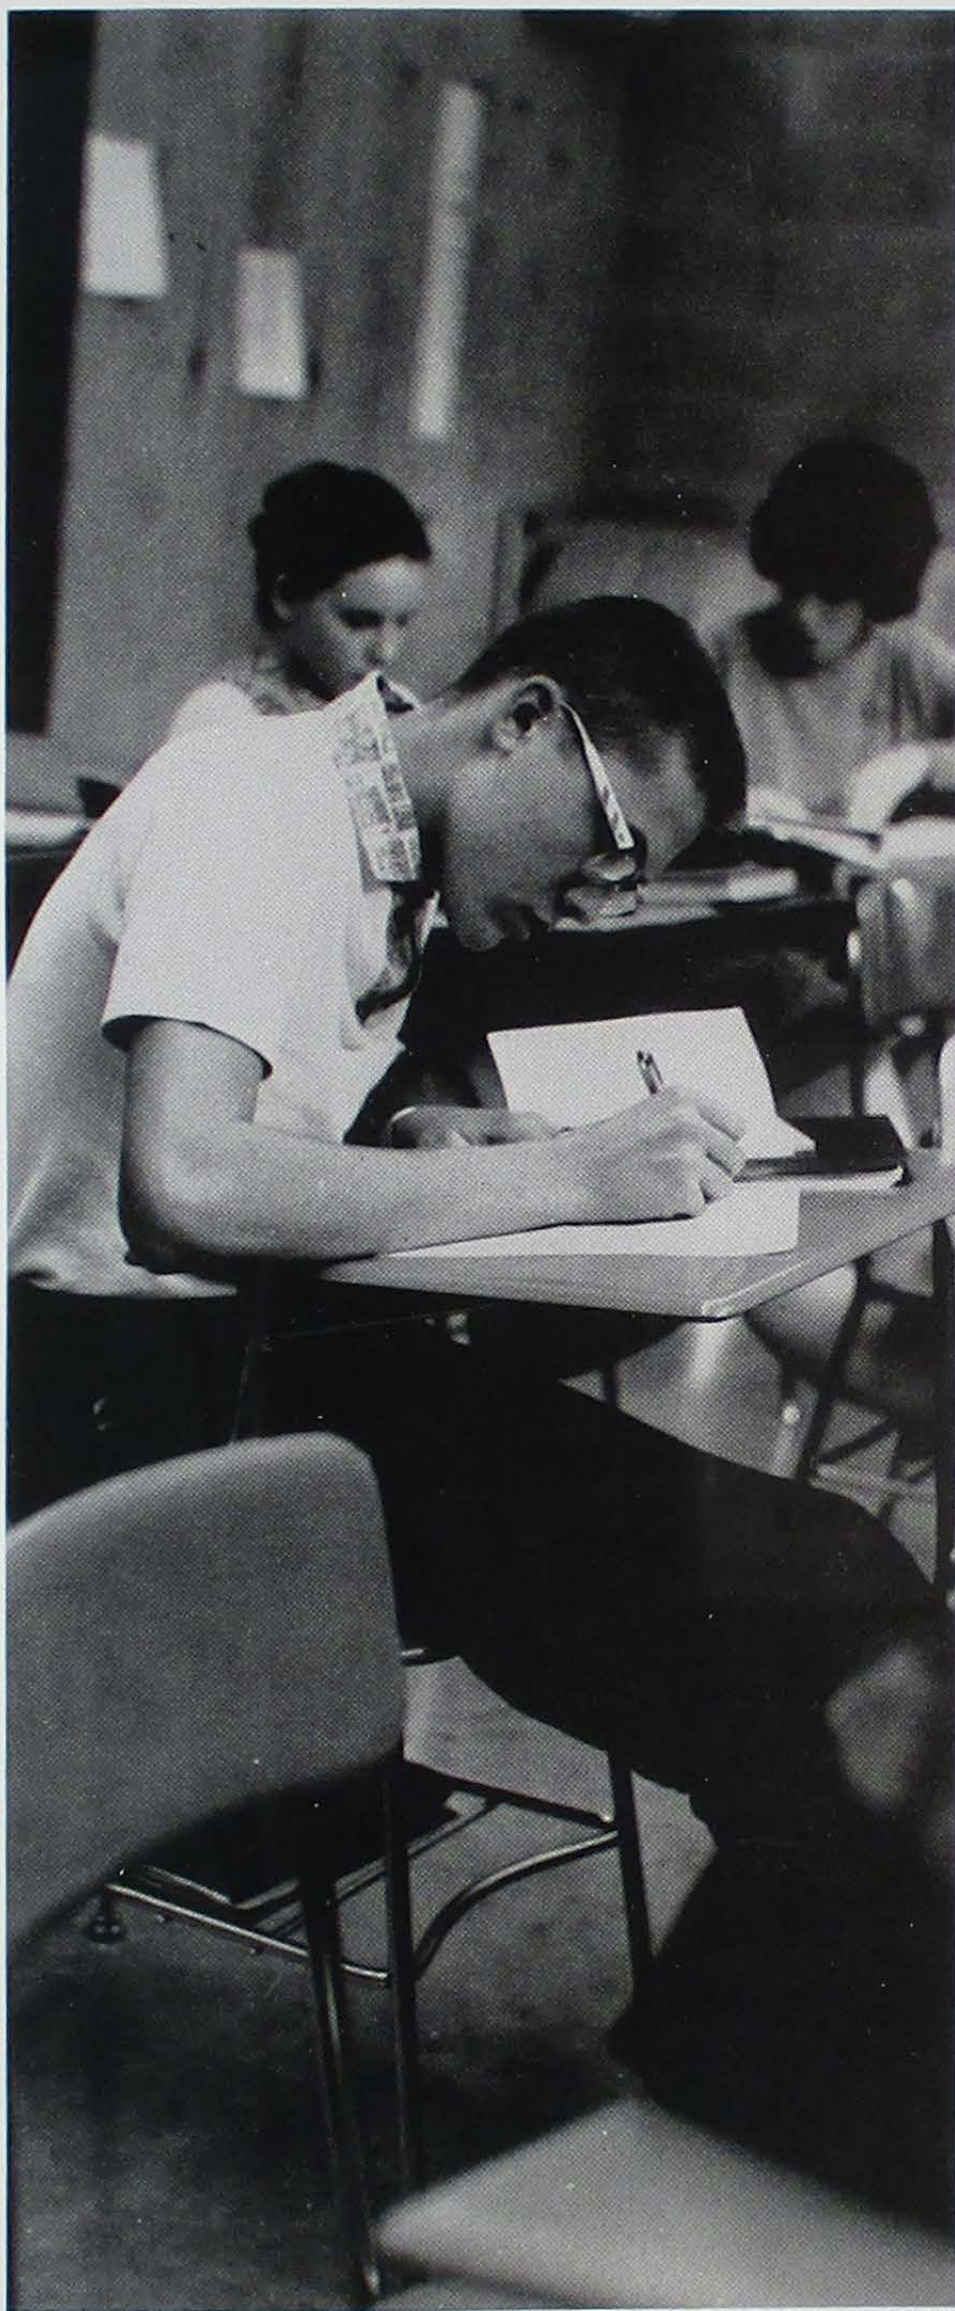

LINED UP for the traditional Ames High fight song are the familiar cheerleaders and several ambitious faculty members.

WITH SPRING GRADUATION a large majority of seniors will arrive at a college campus to begin four years of work. Iowa State University at Ames receives the major bulk of graduates.

Seven Attend Mock State Conventions

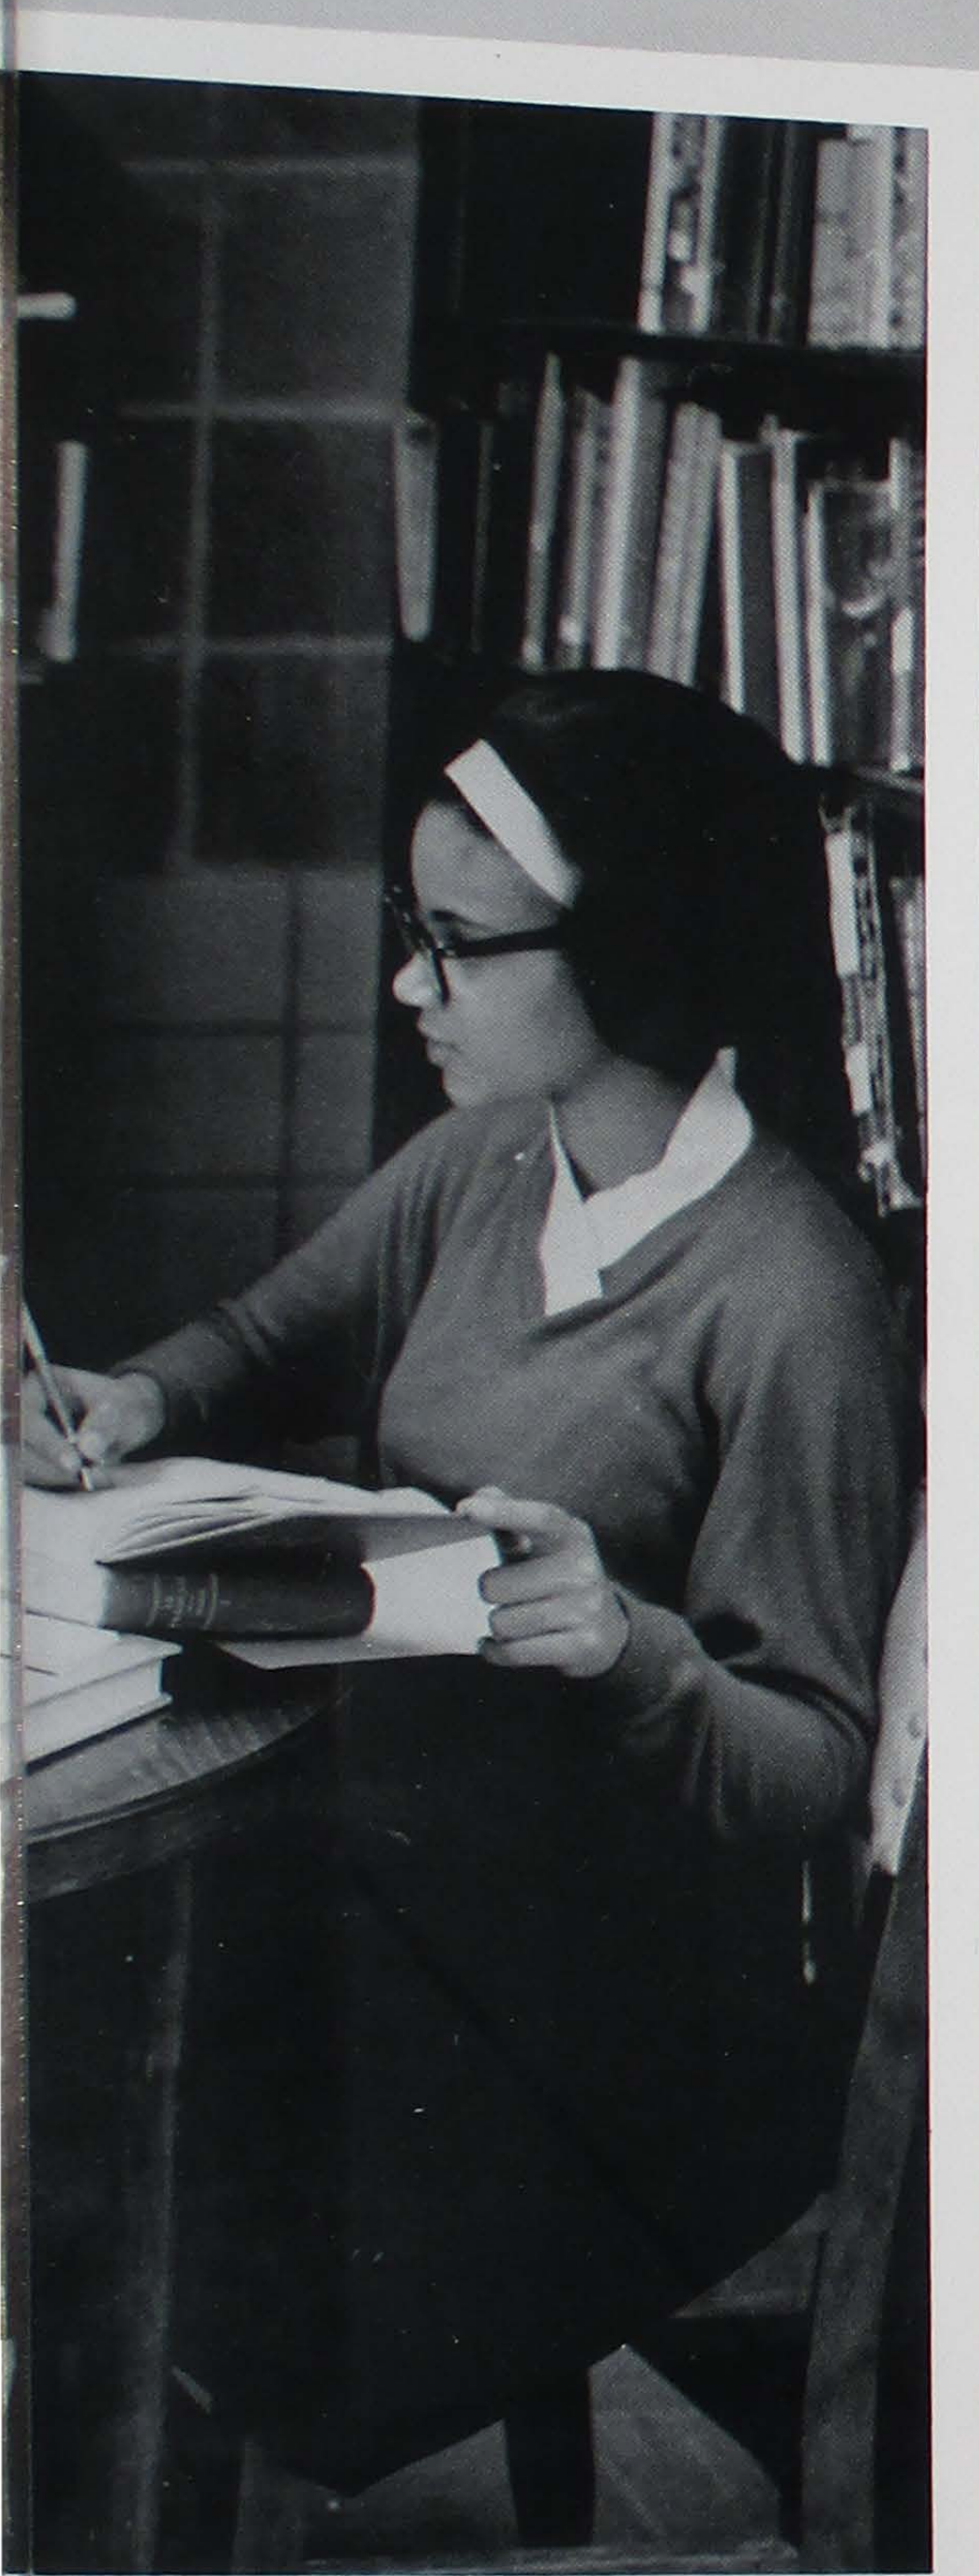

Spring was a busy time for the Ames High students as the year's activities came to a close with a rush of parties and programs. After months of preparation and anticipation the class of '63 finally experienced the excitement of senior week and graduation. Slumber parties, dances, and picnics provided the fun while a proper note of seriousness was supplied by an inspiring baccalaureate service and the final graduation exercises. The juniors had earlier entertained the senior class at the annual Junior-Senior Frolic held in the Central Gymnasium.

Track meets, school parties and concerts also filled the calendars of AHS students during the spring months. However, as the last weeks of the school year approached, pleasure was put aside and in its place came hard work and study. Important semester tests loomed ahead, and everyone put forth his last store of brain power in an attempt to bring up lagging grades. Summer vacation seemed especially appealing after the long hours spent studying and taking tests.

This year, as in the past, seven fortunate Ames High Students will start their summers by attending Boys' State and Girls' State, both sponsored by the American Legion. Last year the six boys, chosen by their classmates, spent a wonderful week at Camp Dodge and learned about government by taking part in its functions. Ames High's representative to Girls' State went to Cedar Falls where a model working government was created through exciting campaigns and elections.

Academics

Each of our lives has centered around a jammed curriculum. A multitude of inspirations, shaded facets different from all other experiences, were offered to the inquisitive mind. In a quiet way, through a battered book or learned mind, vistas of unbelievable taste illuminated our worlds; and fields such as these came to life:

History, Government, International Relations
Mathematics
English, Literature
Science—Biology to Chemistry
Languages—Latin, Spanish, French, German
Drama
Art
Music—choral and instrumental Physical Education
Industrial Arts; Home Economics
Distributive Education

Probing the sensitive pathways to the mind were the teachers, their assistants, the administration, and the initiative of the students.

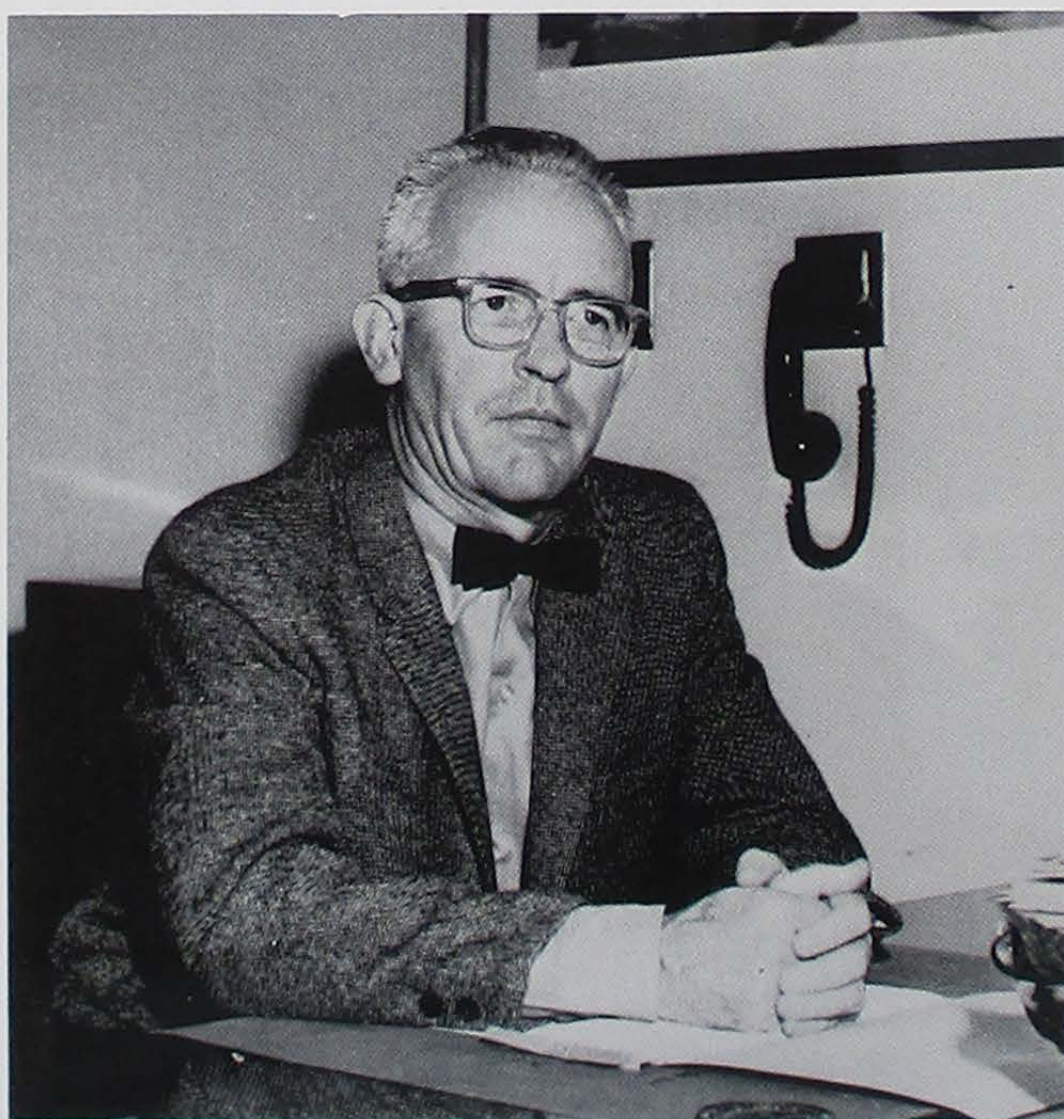

SUPERINTENDENT Walter Hetzel

PRINCIPAL Herbert Adams

Increased Enrollment, New School

VICE-PRINCIPAL RITLAND held consultations with all senior boys.

With the student body finally settled in the new school, the loudest sigh of relief probably came from the members of the administration. For the past two years they faced greatly increased responsibility and difficulty due to the unique two school system. The problems that arise while adjusting to the new buildings must still be met, but this year duties resemble more those of a normal administration. Heading the executive department of Ames High were Mr. Herbert Adams, principal, and Mr. Everett Ritland, vice-principal.

Principal Adams came to Ames from La Mars, Iowa, in August of 1944; he had been principal of the senior high school there. He has received degrees at the State University of Iowa and South Dakota State College, and has attended summer school at Minn. U., Wis. U., and USC. The class of '63 was the nineteenth Ames class to graduate under the dedicated leadership and inspiration of Mr. Adams.

Mr. Ritland came to Ames from Gilbert in 1936, where he had taught English and coached. He received his B.A. at Luther College, and did his graduate work at ISU and SUI.

Besides his immediate duties, Mr. Adams must always be looking toward the future. He attempts to keep the scholastic program comprehensive, so that both those students who will go to college and those who will not can be educated in the best possible manner.

As chief executives of Ames High School the principal and his assistant were responsible for providing schedules of classes suitable to both teachers and students. Also included in their duties were organizing and coordinating all the various functions and activities, conferring with students and teachers, acting as clearing agents for the many problems of the school, making final decisions on important matters, and interpreting and executing the regulations of the School Board as they affected the policy of Ames High.

Determining the overall policy for the management and operation of the school system was the duty of the Ames School Board. They were active in determining a comprehensive budget for the schools.

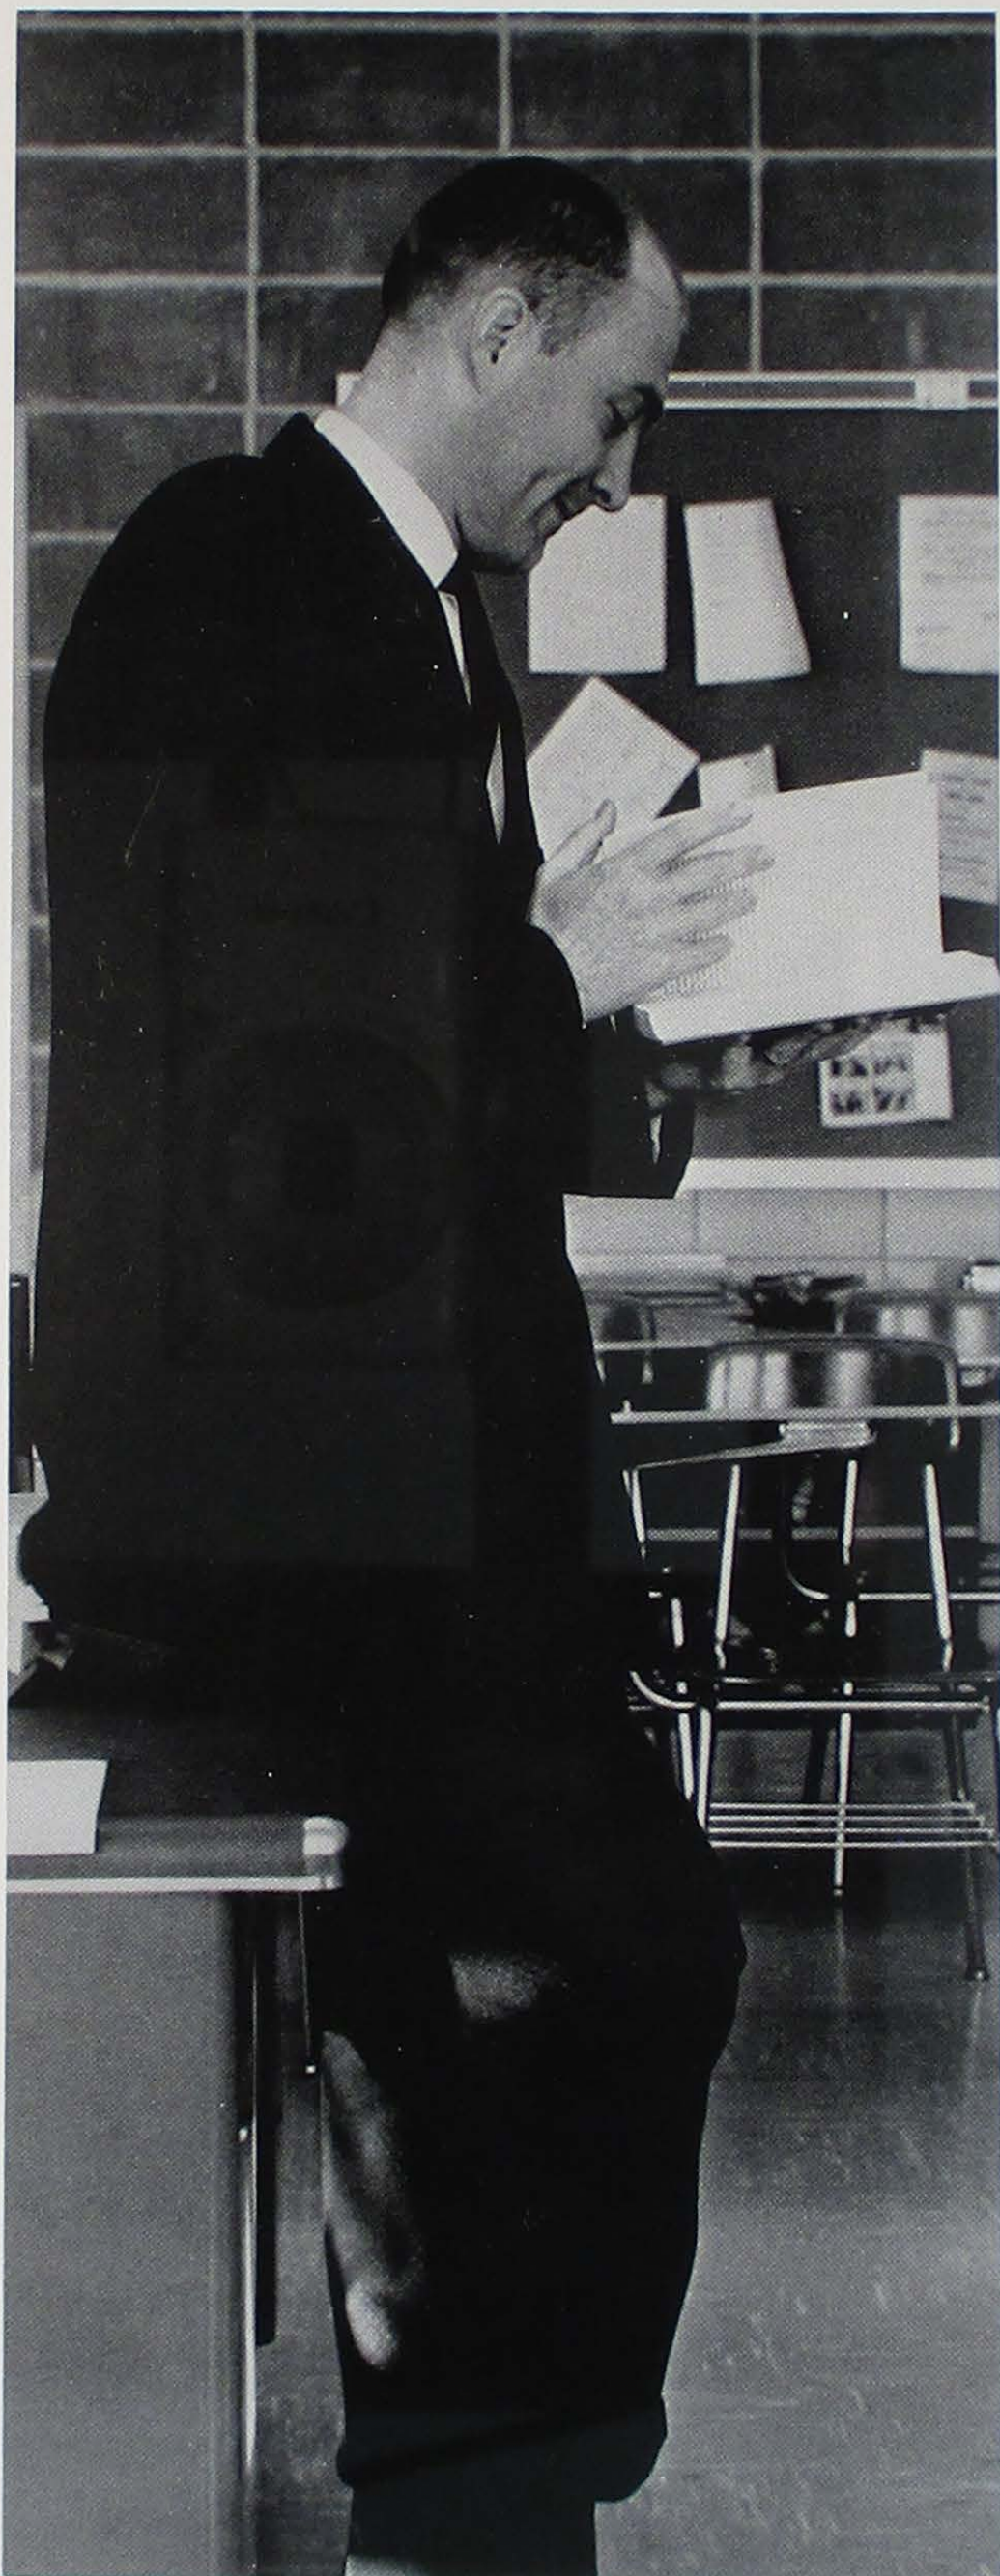

MRS. CHARLOTTE WHITNEY served as the coordinator of guidance services for the Ames School District and as senior girls' advisor, at Ames High.

THE DULL DRONE of a rambling lecturer is typical of some history courses, but Mr. Hausheer has found the key to mental stimulation.

Social sciences are considered a vital part of the curriculum at Ames High, since the future of our nation may largely depend on increased knowledge and understanding of our world. The Social Studies Department, headed by Mr. Page, offers a wide variety of subjects which deal with human beings and their relations with one another.

Two semesters of American History and one semester of American Government are required for graduation. A year of both World History and International Relations and a semester each of Economics and Sociology and elective courses available for students who wish to study further in the field of social science.

International Relations was offered for the first time this year. Taught by Mr. Cole, this class carefully explored the background of state relationships, contemporary international problems, and American foreign policies. A large number of students have judged this to be an extremely valuable course, and it will become a permanent part of the curriculum.

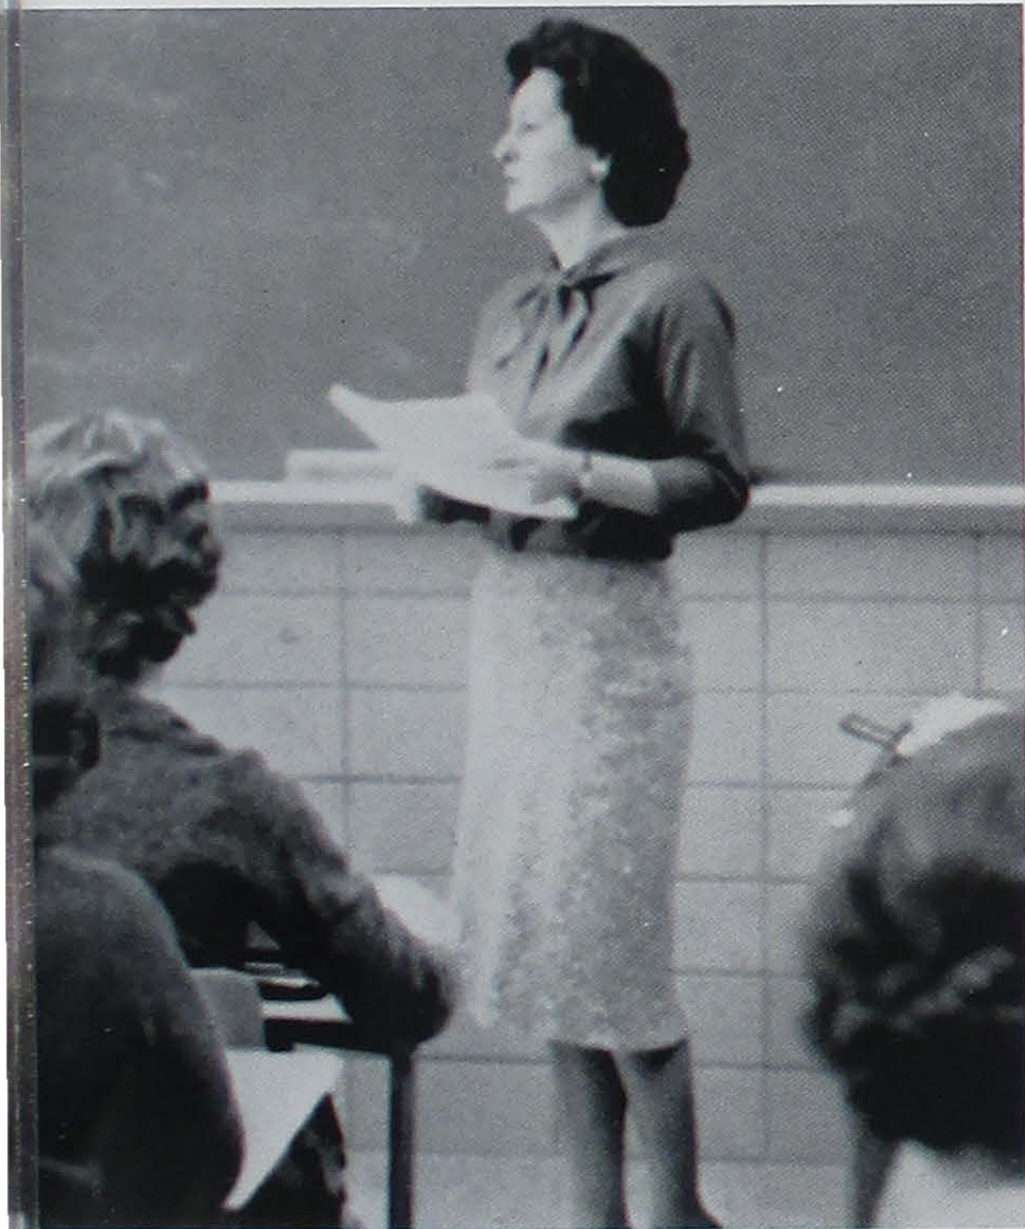

MRS. GARRET'S American History classes had avid discussions over the Civil War.

Relations Is Added to Curriculum

Second Year Algebra Claims

AWED, STUNNED or maybe just surprised at the complexity of simple trig problems is Janet Wildman.

Mathematics, often called the "Queen of the Sciences," began when early man wanted to measure the objects of the world around him. Since then mathematics has become an intrinsic part of numerous areas.

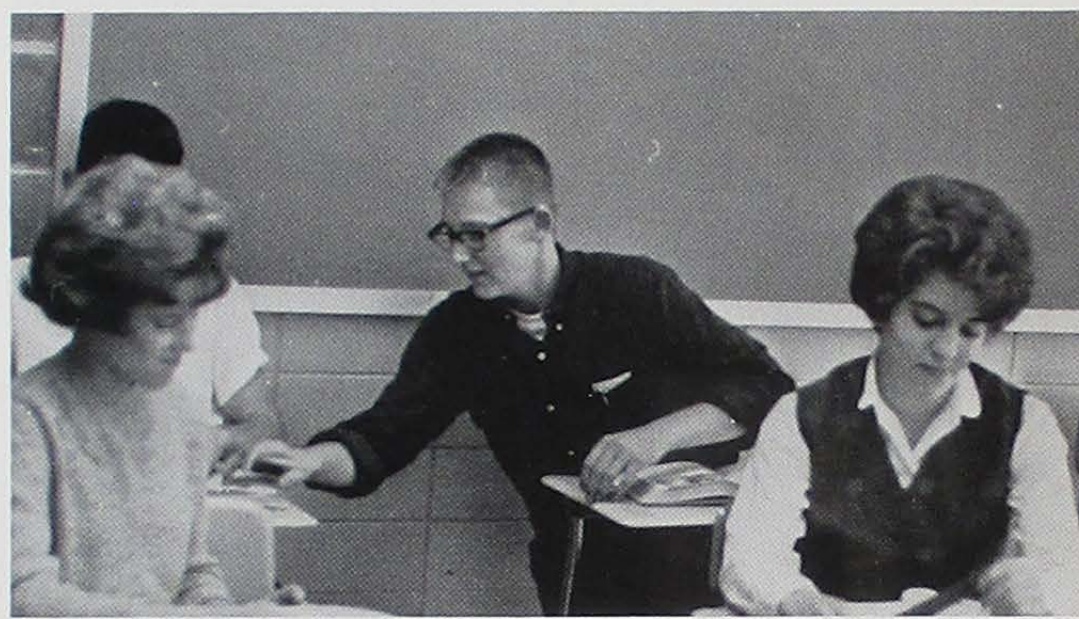

Today, more than ever before, a knowledge of basic mathematical principles is a necessary element in fulfilling social, practical, and vocational needs, which constitute better citizens and civilizations. Therefore, Ames schools required all students to take one year of algebra in ninth grade and one year of geometry in the sophomore year. This requirement might be waived and substituted with another math course by a signed request from a parent and approval by the principal.

Additional courses in the mathematics curriculum, which may be taken by qualified students, include: Applied Math, Business Arithmetic, Algebra 3 and 4, Trigonometry, and Analytic Geometry. This academic year offered superior students a challenge through the installation of an honors course in second year algebra and geometry. The Mathematics Department consisted of six teachers and was headed by Mr. Hiedeman.

The increasing complexity of modern society has made a knowledge of the subjects taught by the English Department a prerequisite to success. Man must be able to communicate his thoughts and ideas to others, or his works will be in vain. He also must be able to interpret the writings of others in order that he may make use of their accomplishments and avoid their mistakes.

Four years of English are required at AHS. The department consists of thirteen teachers, headed by Miss Wilcox. The courses offered include Sophomore English, American, English and World Literature, Journalism, Communication Skills, Developmental Reading, and Speech. The division also sponsors some of the school's largest activities which include the Web, Spirit, Scratch Pad, and drama.

New equipment bought for this section included textbooks, tape recorders, records, and also reading accelerators for use in developmental reading. The new high school also provides the photographers on the publications' staff with a centralized, well-equipped dark room.

Science Division Offers Honors Courses

FASCINATION in the wonders of chemistry is nearly universal; here Libby Roepke works on a lab involving the balancing of chemical equations from experimental data.

Science is becoming an increasingly important field in our complex world; Ames High presented no exception to the recent rule of increased emphasis in the science curriculum. This year introduced to the students honors courses in biology, physics, and chemistry. These classes provided a challenge to exceptional students.

Mr. Trump headed the Science Department consisting of five teachers. Under the division's supervision, new facilities for laboratories in each field have been provided. New equipment has enabled extensive work to be done through experiments by all classes.

No science courses are required; however, a great number of students saw the courses' importance and completed several years of science classes. The electives offered were: biology, usually taken during the sophomore year; physics, taken by juniors; and the seniors' chemistry. The department also sponsored Science Seminar which was a one-fourth credit activity for extending the science training in specialized fields.

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT—W. Ripp, D. Vandecar, B. Von Wittich.

Characterize Language Classes

Noises, paint, and action keynoted the four major divisions of fine arts courses and activities. The Language Department, headed this year by Mr. Ripp, offered several years each of Latin, Spanish, French, and German. The students in these classes used the language laboratory. Through the recorded lessons, oral communication and word pronunciation were improved.

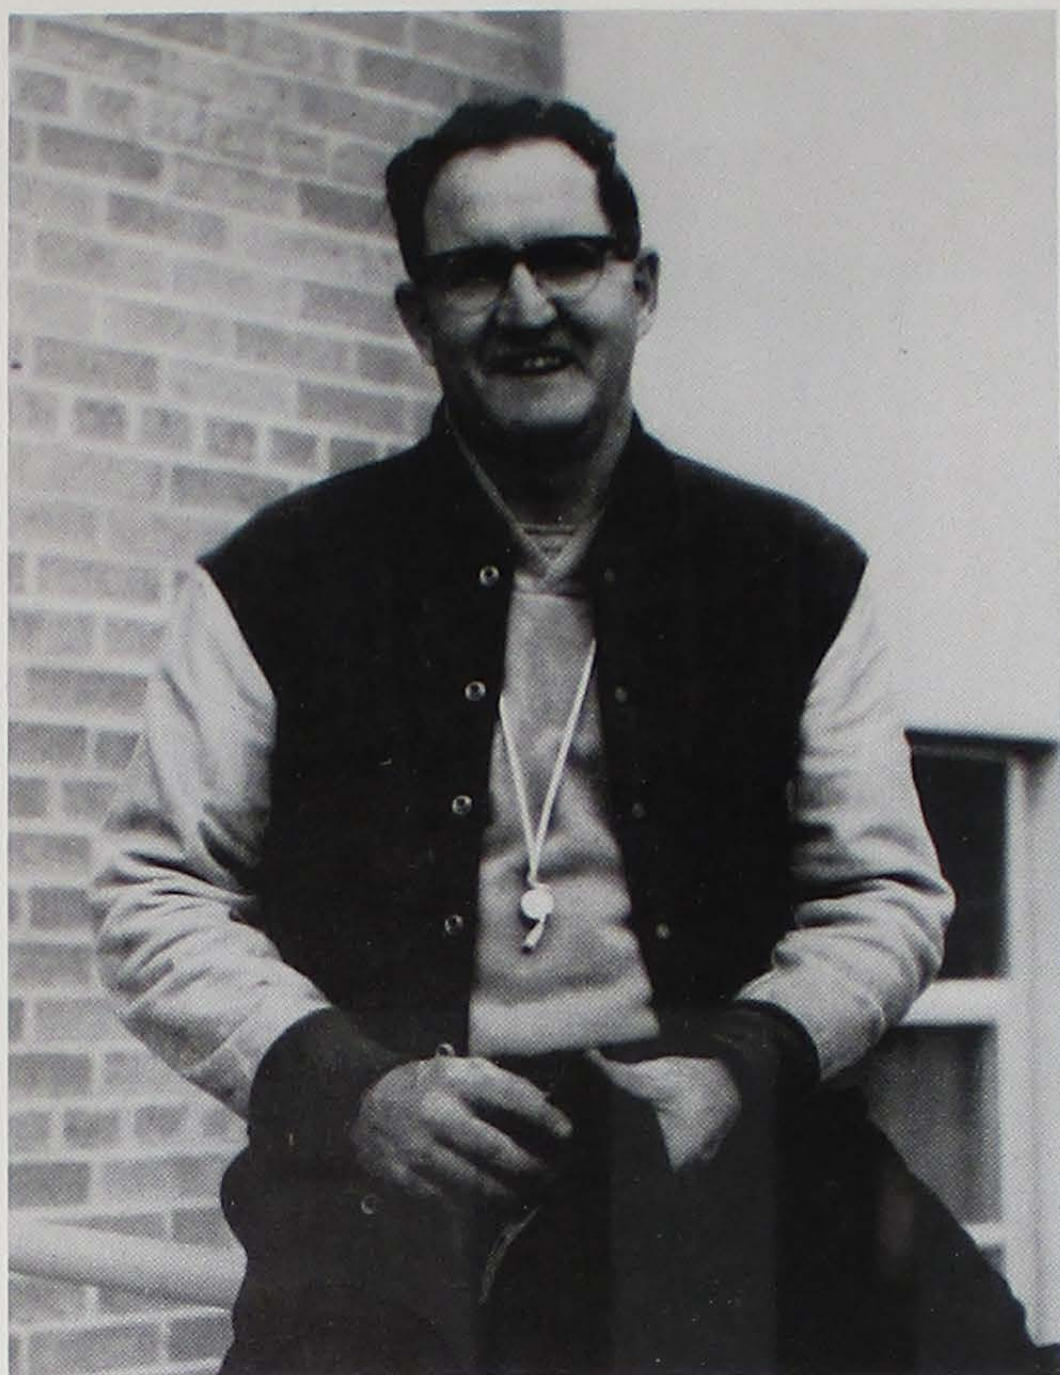

Music, both vocal and instrumental, played a major part in the school life of about half of Ames High's students. Class choices included Boys' and Girls' Glee Clubs. Mixed Choruses, Concert, Pep, and Marching Bands, and Orchestra. Special lessons were given in all areas to individuals and groups.

Three art classes were taught this year by Mrs. J. Anderson, a new teacher. Students in these classes need not have had any previous instruction.

The Dramatics Department also had a new instructor, Mrs. S. Anderson, who, with Mr. Hamilton, led dramatics classes and produced the plays. The number of participants in the Fine Arts Department increased greatly this year, and the new teachers were welcome additions to their divisions.

MRS. YOUNG operates the master console in the language lab during a Spanish class.

MR. SMALLING organized all intramural activities.

Scores of girls clad in black shorts and white blouses were seen nearly every day exercising, playing football and baseball, or hiking through the weeded areas of the school grounds. At the same time, in rain, mud, cold weather and even in an October snow, the boys had football and baseball tournaments, ran cross-country races, and attempted other popular sports.

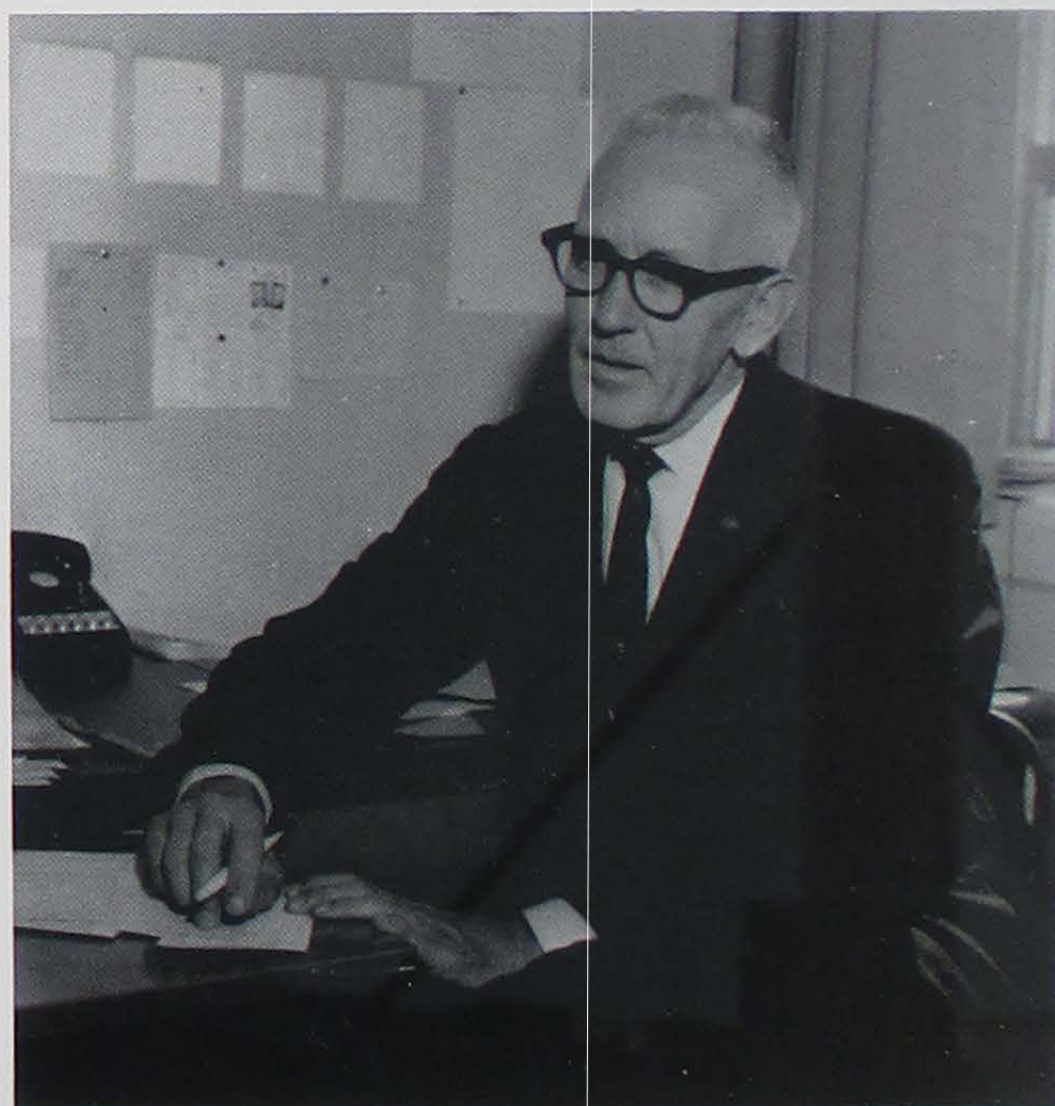

The Physical Education Department was without a gym this year; but the girls' teacher, Miss Zanders, and the boys' instructors, Mr. Wells and Mr. Smalling, solved the problem. When winter set in, the classes retired to the basement of the second unit for ping pong, more exercising, trampolining, and other appropriate activities during each of the required bi-weekly PE periods.

Besides the program of physical education for students not out for sports or in marching band, a full interschool athletic program was offered in many sports. These included football, tennis, track, golf, baseball, and for the first time this year wrestling. An after school intramural program for the boys and a recreational program for the girls filled out this division of the school.

Industrial Education gives special manual training to boys interested in technological occupations. Mr. Shadle, who directed this department, was assisted by Mr. McBride, Mr. Bengtson, and Mr. Stone.

Mechanical drawing students worked with lettering, layouts, instruments and blue prints. Technical drafting supplemented the skills learned in mechanical drawing. Woodworking students designed and constructed pieces of furniture. Future mechanical engineers learned about welding, metal-casting and sheet metal in the metal shop to give the auto mechanics students first hand information on the operation of the automobiles. Basic electricity, and communications were studied by the electronics students.

Every individual is interested in his future. The Home Economics Department prepared girls for both their future occupation, and marriage and a family. Miss Trout is the Home Ec instructor for AHS.

The wide field of vocational homemaking included many units to help the individual become a better participating family member. The second year of this course emphasized preparation for marriage and home management. Planning a wardrobe and constructing clothing, preparing and serving attractive meals, and interior decorating are popular areas of study.

The Future Homemakers of America was made up of interested students. A special theme, "Home Economics—Heart of Your Future," was carried out in FHA work all over the state this year.

MISS TROUT instructs home economics students in practical first aid methods. Through class experiences the girls learn to cope with minor everyday accidents.

Work Experience Are Popular Courses

CUSTODIANS—Mr. Lash, Mr. and Mrs. Whaley.

To help the students make career choices, reach decisions as to future education, and gain valuable job experience, the school offered several programs. These included distributive education, industrial occupations, and office training. The student spent a maximum of one-half of each school day during his senior year in one of these programs. Credit toward graduation was given, and a nominal wage was paid to the student trainee.

The work experience programs at AHS gave the student a chance to explore an occupation such as nursing, teaching, secretarial work, or other jobs approved by the school coordinator. Faculty members in charge of these programs were Mr. Overturf and Mr. Shadle.

Commercial courses offered included typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping. These courses were especially popular and worthwhile. They often led to direct summer or permanent employment.

Two buildings containing numerable classrooms filled with over nine hundred muddy shoed students provided the janitorial staff with a monumental task. The staff were, however, ready to help when special functions took place in the building.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION—J. Overturf and O. Shadle.

Athletics

From the first whiff of a burning September leaf, the race is on; and the most important event of each week is the Friday night game. Fall means football; winter signifies basketball; spring, track; and summer, baseball. These four sports with numerous others make up more than enough activities to fill an athletic year.

Ames High participates in many inter-school sports. Several organizations are devoted solely to the support of the various teams. The actual game, however, involves much more than buying a ticket; countless hours of work go into the athletic performances as in any play. The story of a few of those performances is told in this section:

Varsity Football Squad Captures

A season riddled with setbacks! If the final score alone was used, Ames High appeared to have a rather discouraging season: 4th in conference, five game losing streak, lost to Boone for the 1st time in 29 years, and to Grinnell for the 1st time in 22 years. But, basically, what really counts is how the boys played facing one of the toughest schedules in the state; the Little Cyclones marked their games with a fight to the finish. Several games saw Ames hold highly rated, high-scoring teams in the state to a 1 touchdown advantage, only to fail in the closing minutes. The CIC boasted one of the toughest conferences in a decade, with four teams rated in the top 10 during the season. Whatever the final score, Ames High spirit and fight left their impression on the foe.

Once again Ames opened its football season against Roosevelt of Des Moines and for the third straight year they wrecked the Roughrider opener.

Roosevelt opened the game with a long drive that pushed to the Ames six. Then the Ames offensive shifted into high gear as they powered the ball to the 46 in three plays behind the running of Yeaman and Landsberg. The next play saw the Orange and Black catch the Roosevelt defenders flatfooted as Grabau tossed the pigskin to Gualdoni to net the final 54 yards to the goal. The conversion was good and Ames led 7-0. Not to be outdone, the 'riders came back twice in the first quarter to score, 13-7.

The second quarter saw the Little Cyclones and the Roughriders battle to a nearly scoreless duel. However, a bad pass from the Roosevelt center to the punter saw Ames gain control of the ball on the Roughrider's 10 yard line. Tom Landsberg then punched through the 'rider defense in two plays to rack up another tally. The conversion supplied Ames a shaky lead, 14-13, at the half.

Boone Topples Little Cyclones 28-12

The third period saw Landsberg score from the 1 to cap a 60 yard drive. Tally later came as junior quarterback Craig Mack raced 62 yards to the Roosevelt goal on a punt return. The last Ames tally went to Landsberg again as he lugged the ball over from 5 yards out to end an 85 yard drive. The 'Riders pushed across two more touchdowns, but time ran out and Ames had a victory, 33-26.

History was rewritten Friday, September 21, as the Toreadors of Boone, behind the running of Roger Dutton, outplayed the Little Cyclones, 28-12, to end 29 years of dominance. Not since 1933 had Ames lost to Boone, but this year Boone had decided to win.

Boone drew blood in the first quarter on a plunge over the goal by Dutton from the 3 to cap off an 80 yard drive. A good conversion pushed the score to 7-0. Not to be outdone, Ames returned the kick-off to their 36. Three plays later saw Craig Mack drop an aerial over the Boone defenders to Landsberg for a 61 yard romp to the goal. The attempt to tie the score failed and the quarter ended with the Toreadors leading 7-6.

Another Boone T.D. came with 0:14 left in the half after an Ames scoring attempt lost steam on the 10. The score stood 14-6.

AMES SURROUNDS a Grinnell drive through the center.

The final Ames score came in the third quarter as the Little Cyclones again took to the air on a pass covering 64 yards from Mack to Grabau. Again the conversion failed and Ames moved within scoring reach 14-12.

Boon rounded out the scoring with two more T.D.'s and the following conversions to rack up a commanding 16 point lead. As the gun sounded, the field was covered with screaming Boone Fans as they rushed to claim their prize—the victory bell.

The first loss of the season had come and gone. Newton, rated third in the state and favored to win the conference, was the next CIC opponent. The ball changed hands three times early in the first quarter; it was Grabau who finally twisted over the goal to tally a hard earned T.D. The extra point failed, but the Little Cyclones held a 6-0 advantage.

Undaunted, the Cardinals took the following kick on their 36 and promptly drove 64 yards to score. The conversion was stopped and the game was knotted, 6-6.

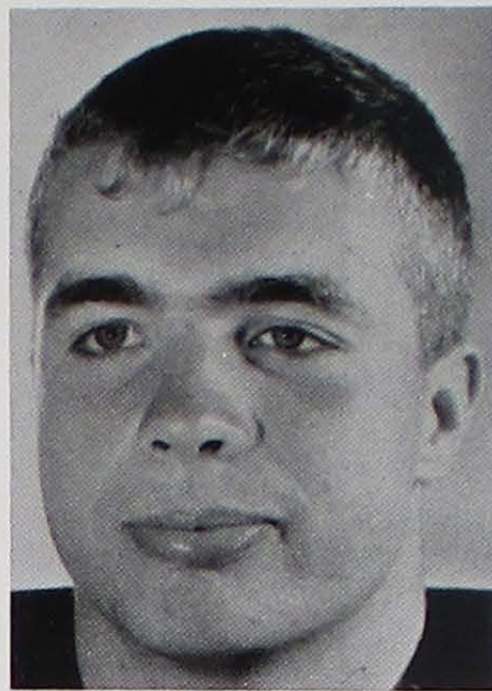

Two scoring threats highlighted the second quarter; but the half ended with the game still tied, 6-6.

TOM TICE: elected year team captain.

The second half saw the Little Cyclones' defense weaken as Newton repeatedly battered the line for gains. Two touchdowns were registered to push the score to 20-6; the final gun sounded.

After two successive CIC defeats, Ames hoped to regain lost status; but history repeated itself and the Grinnell Tigers loped home with a 13-7 victory.

The first tally of the game was notched after the Little Cyclones gained control of the ball on their 39. Grabau and Gualdoni, on consecutive drives, ground out 25 yards to the Tiger's 36 yard line. After a 3 yard setback, Mack passed to Peterson who crossed the goal for 6 points. Four minutes and 31 seconds had ticked off the clock when Tom Landsberg burst into the end zone for the extra point and Ames led 7-0.

Grinnell then drove 30 yards to the goal and registered for 6 points. The conversion was blocked and Ames held a slim lead 7-6 at the half.

The final tally came with 2:15 gone in the 3rd quarter as a punt return covered 75 yards to the goal.

Homecoming "62". Spirit—determination—hope. The odds favored heavily toward the powerful Wahawks of Waterloo. Two fumbles in the first quarter proved to be the death sentence for Ames. Three plays after the opening kickoff the Little Cyclones fumbled and West Waterloo gained possession on the Ames 30. In six plays the Wahawks scored on an end sweep to break open the game. The extra point "split the crossbars" and Waterloo was in business 7-0.

On the third play after the following kickoff, a fumble saw Waterloo pick it up and run to the Ames 4. In two plays West raised the score to 14-0 with 5:15 left to play in the first quarter.

The remaining part of the game was fought to a stanstill. The Little Cyclones registered their fourth loss, 14-0.

After four hours of riding to Sioux City, the Little Cyclones fell to the powerful East football team, 38-7.

Strong running and hard blocking proved the downfall of Ames as the marauding Raiders struck four times in the first half to jump to a 25-0 lead. 153 yards rushing in the half with 127 in the first quarter proved too much for the Little Cyclones as they were held to 56 yards.

Ames' only T.D. came when a blocked kick went loose in the end zone, and left end J. Peterson jumped on it to score. As T. Landsburg ran the extra point, the gun sounded, giving East a thumping 38-7 victory.

Ironically, the Raider offense moved easily against Ames in scoring six touchdowns, but when the time came to run the extra point, they weakened and made only two during the game.

Carrying with them the burden of a 1-5 season's record, the Little Cyclones met and defeated the Marshalltown Bobcats to score their first CIC victory. The Little Cyclones laced the Bobcats' defense for five touchdowns while yielding only one to the enemy.

The fourth quarter saw most of the action as Marshalltown erupted with a barrage of passes to score on a 31 yard pass play. Ames added two more T.D.s and one extra point to its score, bringing the final total to 33-6.

Fresh from a 32-6 pasting of Marshalltown, The Little Cyclones met and scalped the Oskaloosa Indians in the last CIC game of the year, 18-12.

What was thought to be a comfortable 12 point lead vanished as Osky scored twice in succession, but also failed to convert successfully, and the half ended a different game, 12-12.

The third quarter saw an Oskaloosa fumble on their 32 prove fatal as the air attack from Grabau to Yeamen and Yeamen's running netted the final score of the game. Again the extra point failed, but the lead proved sufficient and Ames won, 18-12, to end a 3-5 season.

Playing a five game season, the Ames High Junior Varsity finished on the long end of a 4-1 record. Meeting Des Moines Lincoln (twice), Des Moines North, Marshalltown, and Jefferson; the JC's lost only to Jefferson by the score of 19-6.

Coached by Cecil Spatcher, Junior Varsity consists of junior boys on the varsity team and is designed to give them valuable experience for varsity play and the coming year. This is JC's third year at Ames High.

After rolling over Webster City, Marshalltown, Nevada, Des Moines Tech, and tying Des Moines East, the sophomore football team was defeated in a penalty ridden game with Ft. Dodge, to bring their record to 5-1-1.

Sophomore coach Maurice Hausheer deserves a lot of credit for his third successful season. Mr. Hauseer came here three years ago from Webster City. Since then he has compiled a record of 16 wins, three losses, and two ties.

The success of the sophomore and junior varsity teams usually forecast quite accurately the success of next year's team. With this in mind, Ames High should field a greatly improved team for the '63 season.

The white-shirt section didn't know what they were getting into when they challenged the Pep Club to a yelling duel at the North basketball game. All anonymous faculty judges proclaimed the Pep Club "Undeniably victorious!"

Pep Club, aided by the white shirters, boosts the spirit tremendously at all major athletic clashes. The publicity and hoop committees really had some wits and artists in their ranks, for signs and hoops were indescribably weird.

To pay for the paper, paint, and tape used by those weird sign makers, the money-making committee instigated duel-purpose bake sales: replenishing the treasury and the stomachs of starving students.

To entertain these students the assembly committee worked hand in hand with the cheerleaders to create a light-hearted, hilarious atmosphere in which enthusiasm fairly crackled! The halftime activities, planned by a committee of the same name, also served this purpose.

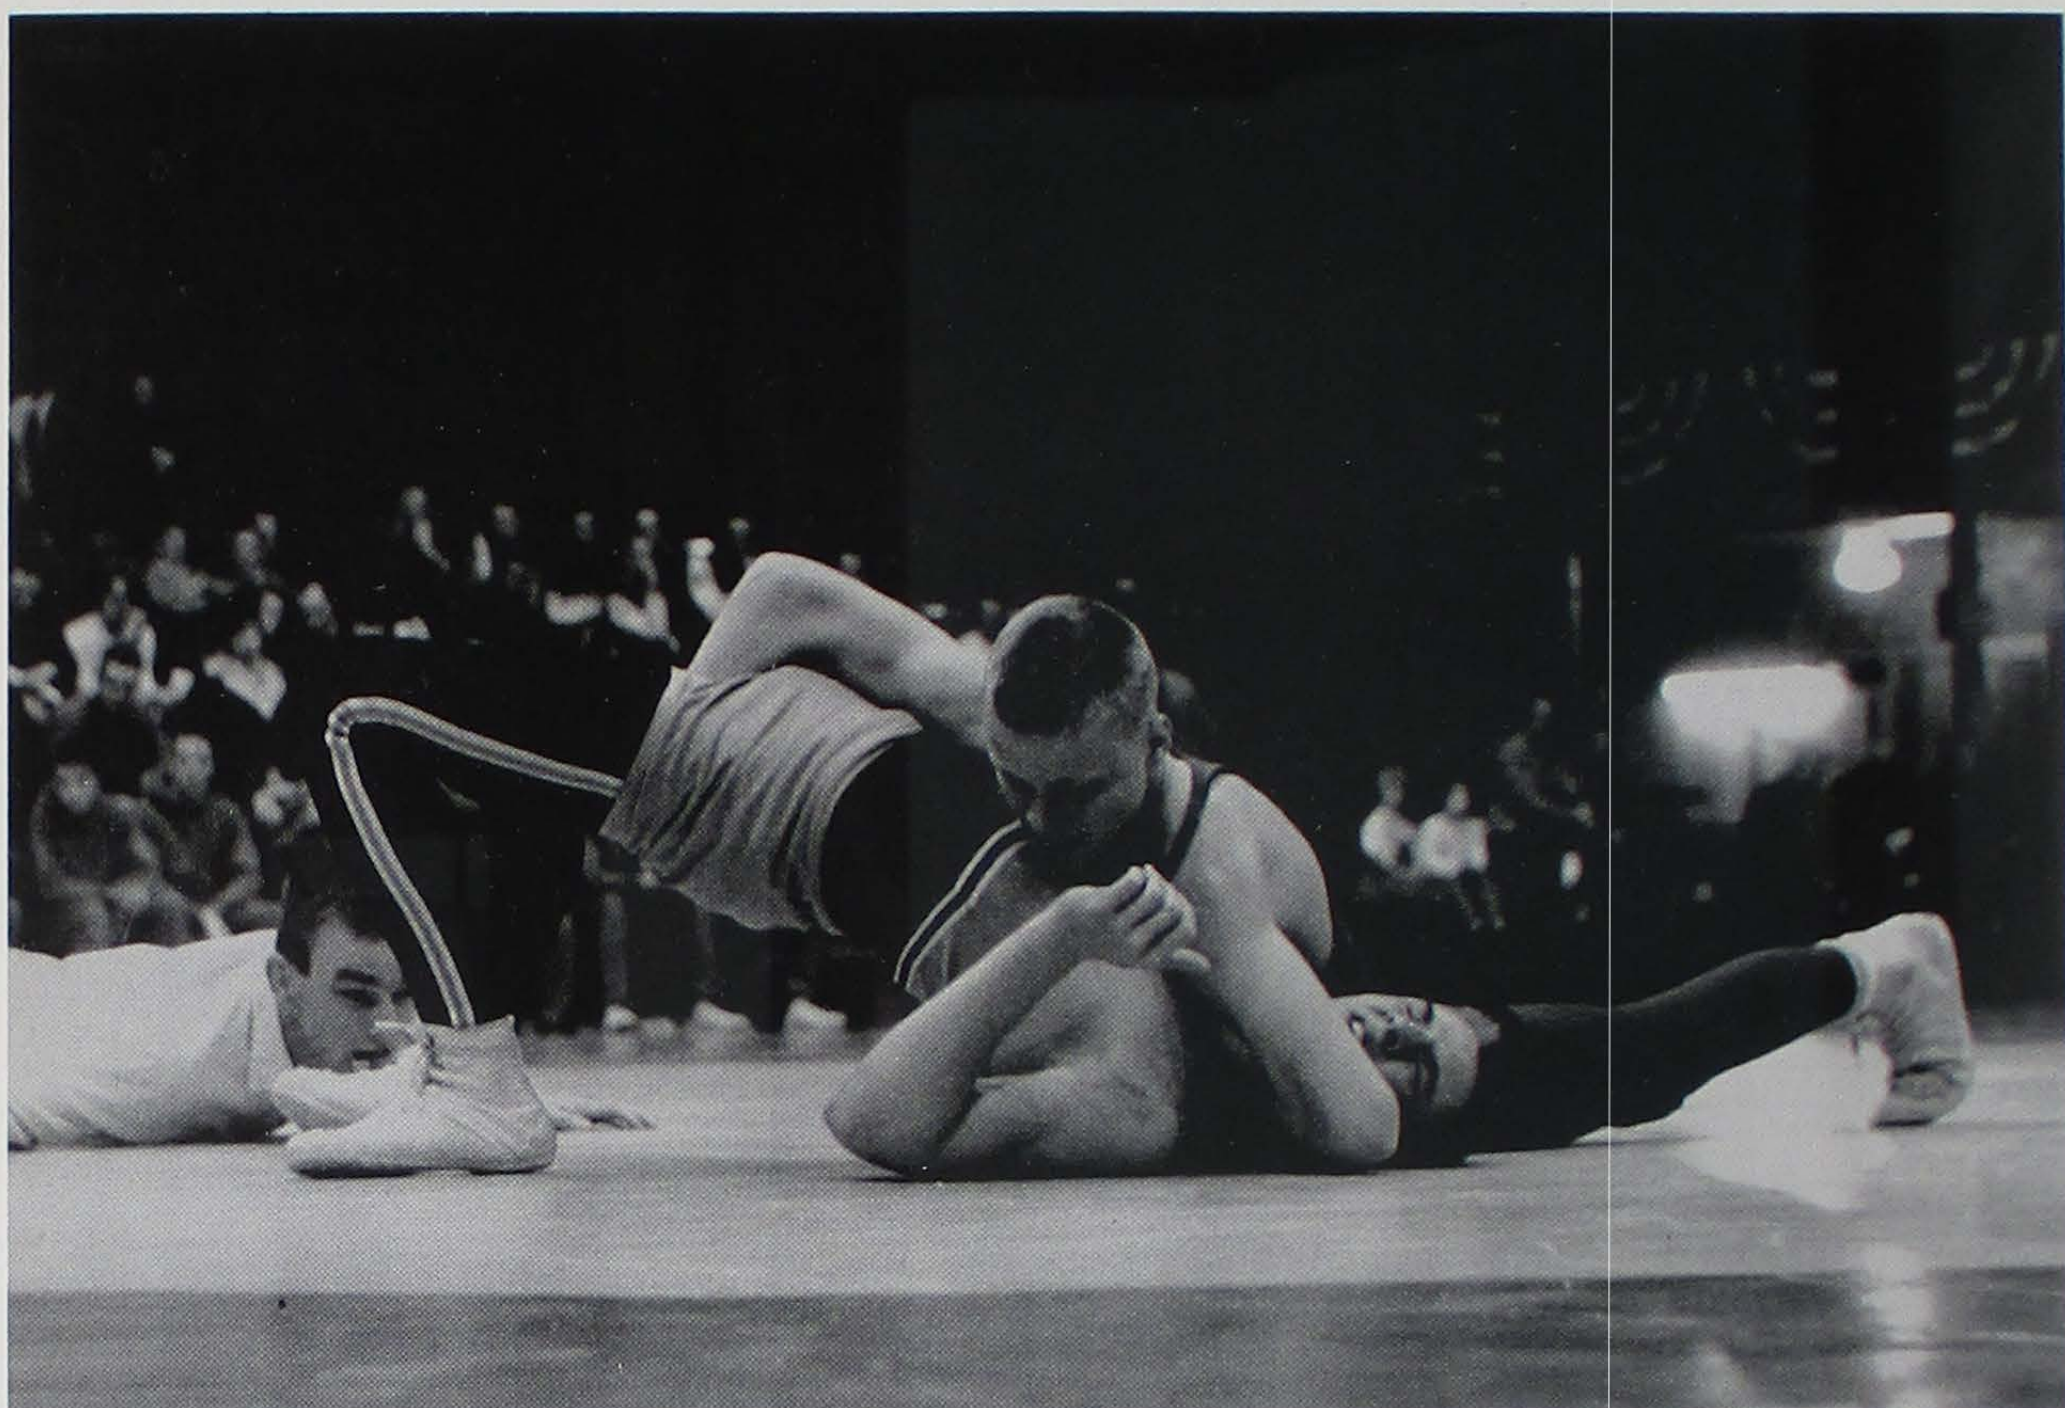

The ushers committee serves a very necessary part of Ames High's athletic program, as does the pom pom committee. Who could get along without their piles of black and orange crepe paper to throw in the air?

Mark in First Season of Competition

1962 marked the beginning of the addition of a new sport to the Ames High curricula, wrestling. While battling against obstacles such as no showers, lack of space, and inadequate facilities, the team did very well for their first season. Basic wrestling, rope jumping, weight lifting and other exercises combined to make a sound physical building sport.

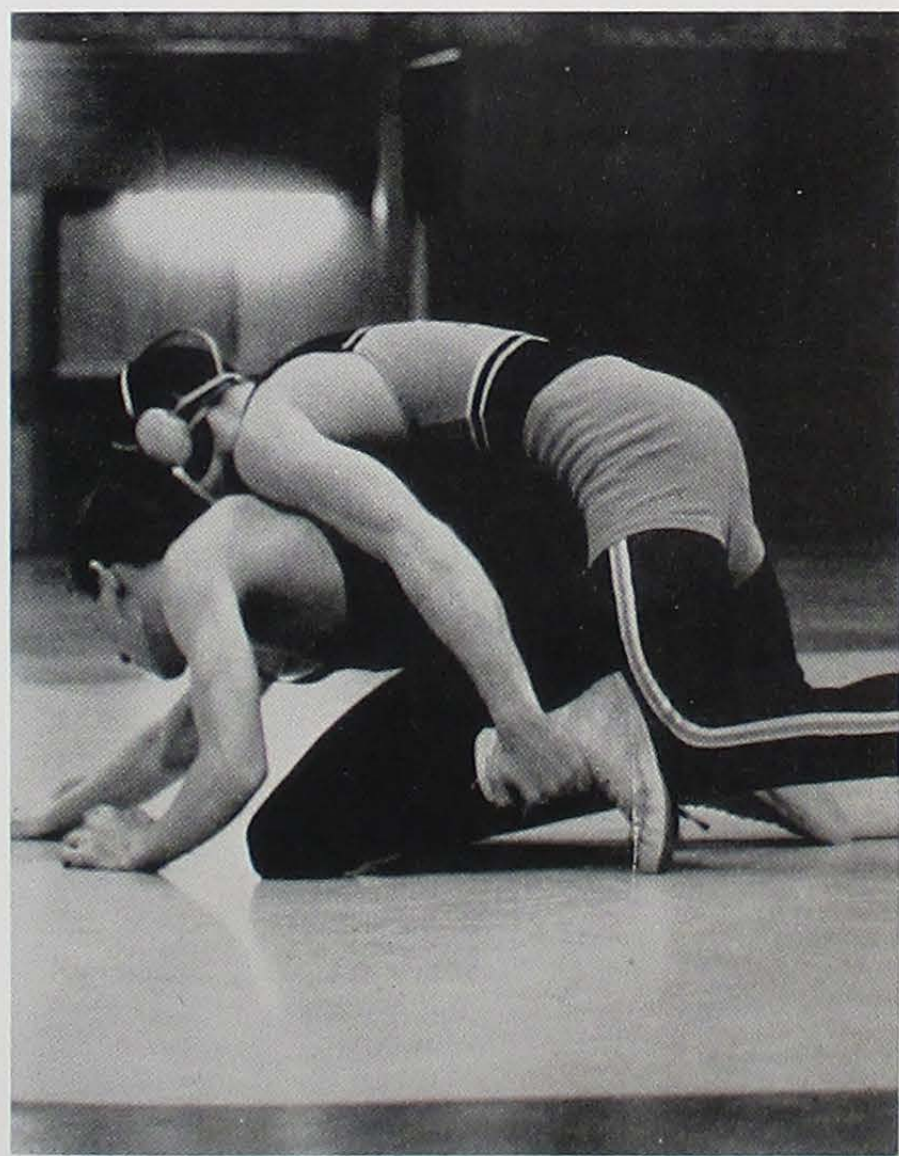

Three meets were scheduled with B teams of other schools. The grapplers tallied 1-2 for the season, winning against Colfax, 21-14, and losing to West Marshall, 38-8, and the Newton "B" squad, 41-5. The Little Cyclones traveled to Colfax on January 16 for the first match of the season. Competition saw Ames win seven of eleven matches and win the meet 21-14. Although there were no falls, Ames turned in a fine performance. The final meet was held at the I.S.U. Armory against the Newton "B" squad on February 1. Newton, bringing with them a strong array of manpower, swept eleven of the twelve matches. Denny Myers, wrestling in the 165 lb. class, registered the only win, as he pinned his man in 47 seconds.

RUNYAN MISSES a lay-up and finds himself enmeshed in Rough-riders.

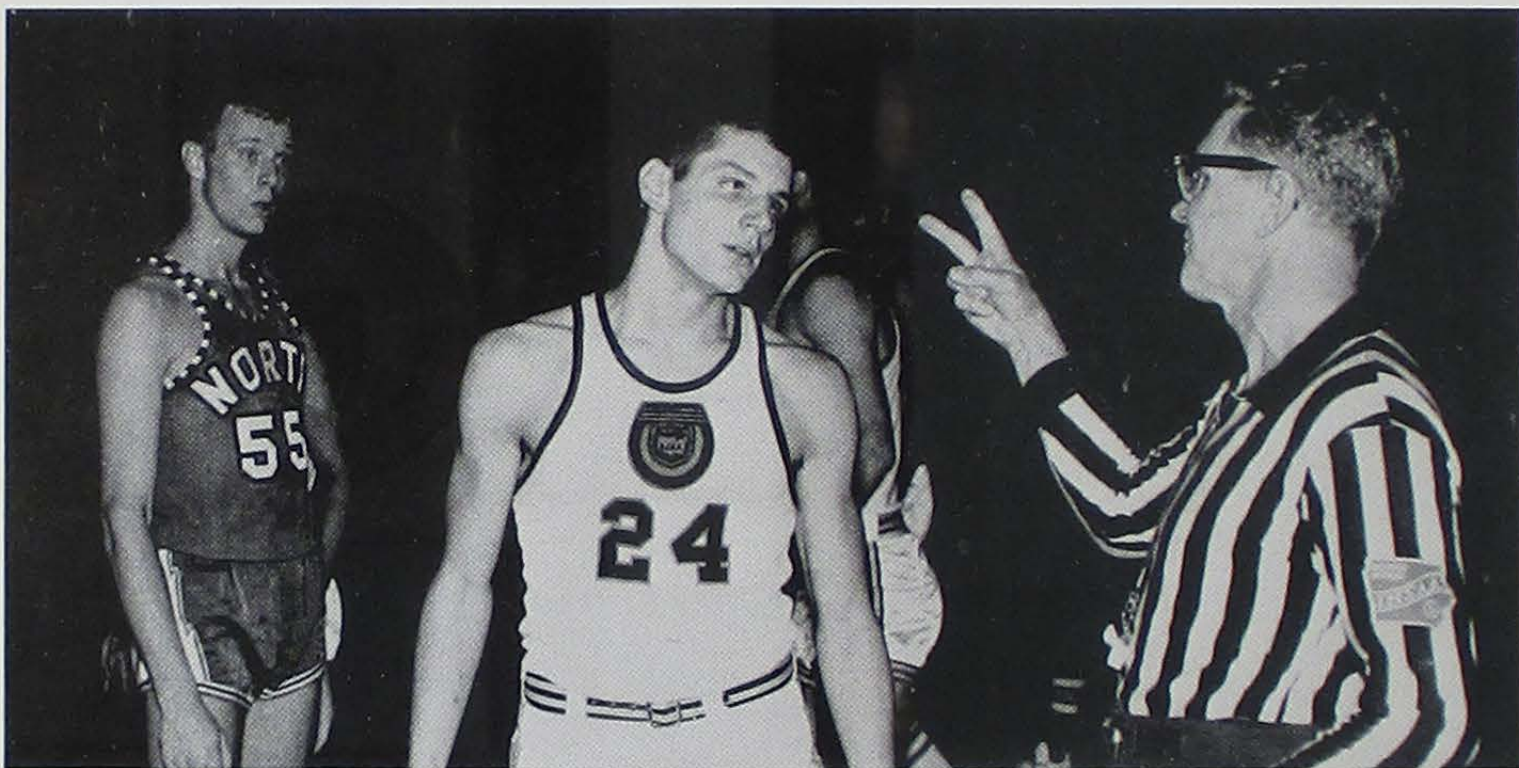

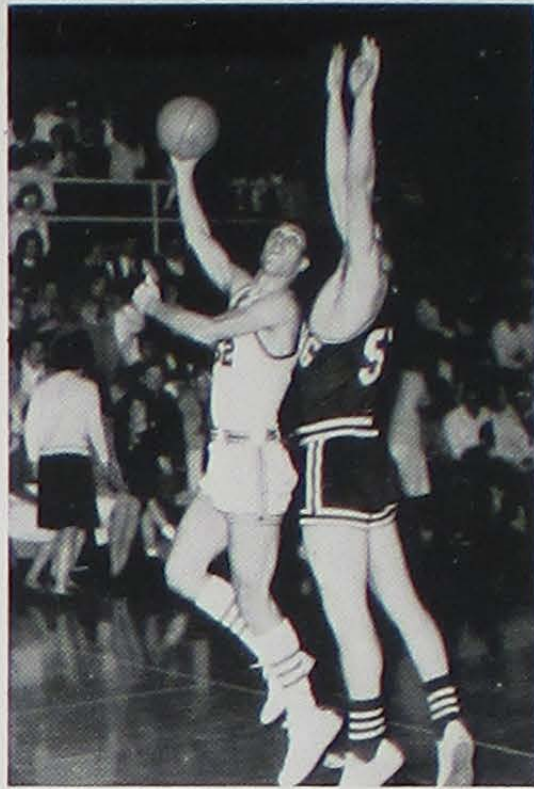

Conference play ended for the Little Cyclones in the '62-'63 basketball season, as they lost to the Boone Treadors, 66-46. Conference play proved to be very exasperating as Ames finished in the cellar with a 1-9 record. Overall play saw the Little Cyclones compile a 4-13 record, winning against Marshalltown, Des Moines Dowling, Webster City, and Des Moines North.

The Newton Cardinals completely overran the conference this year smashing every team they met and finishing with a 10-0 record. They were rated the number two team in the state. Two losses to Oskaloosa, one by a mere two points, two to Grinnell, two to Newton, two to Boone, and one to Marshalltown resulted in a rather discouraging season for the Little Cyclones.

The team was thought to have good potential but was quite inconsistent. The boys would play well for a half and poorly for a half—then on other occasions would play beautifully for the whole game, only to lose their touch in the next.

The Polar Bears of Des Moines North were the first to fall before the Ames cagers. The game was a welcome uplift, for we had dropped the first two matches of the season to Mason City 61-55, and to Des Moines Roosevelt 56-41.

The highlight of the season came as the Little Cyclones downed the Marshalltown Bobcats 61-55, in a contest held at the I.S.U. Armory on December 14 before a crowd of screaming, devoted fans. Ames High scorer for the evening was Mike Schwartz with 19 points. He was followed by Bill Soultz with 13 and Tom Landsberg and Dick Shank with 8 points apiece. The game proved to be a fine team effort.

Webster City and Des Moines Dowling both suffered at the hands of the Little Cyclones, Webster City losing on its home court by the score of 66-45, and Dowling by 72-57.

State tournament competition began March 1 with the Little Cyclones defeating Roland 57-64 and Ballard 50-40 and falling to South Hamilton 53-66.

Many Ames High students are full of pep, energy, and ambition. In the spring of '62 about twenty-five of these energetic girls decided to participate in cheersquad elections. The interested sophomores and juniors demonstrated their skill in front of their own classmates in both the new and old school buildings. Elections were held and the six sophomores and six juniors with the most votes became members of the cheersquad for the following school year. At an all-school assembly these twelve girls did cheers again and the whole student body voted. The six girls with the most votes became regular members of the cheersquad and the remaining girls became alternates. Jane Coletti was named head cheerleader. Pat Wiener, Sue Stucky, Sue Cooper, and Mary Wheelock were alternates. Linda Bergland became a regular to replace Gloria Hatasaki.

Sophomores interested in becoming members of the sophomore cheersquad tried out in front of their classmates early in the fall. Margy Staniforth was named head cheerleader. Serving as alternates were Louise Partin, Carolyn Bliss, Nancy Veline, and Jan Hoff.

The cheerleaders kept the student body informed on the advent and outcome of various athletic events; held pep rallies and cheered at all major sports events.

Breaking through tough defenses added up to a lively game.

Success marked the sophomore basketball season, as they rounded out a 14-3 record by smashing the Des Moines Tech sophomores. Only three losses, two to Marshalltown and one to Des Moines Roosevelt, marred their record. Wins over Mason City, by 15 points, North of Des Moines, by 42 points, Newton, by 32 points, Oskaloosa, by 20 points, Boone, once by 35 points and the other by 27 points, and Dowling, by 35 points added up to a very satisfying season.

Conference play saw the sophomores firmly entrenched in a second place berth with an 8-2 record. Hopes for first place were dashed as Marshalltown squeezed past Ames in a 64-62 duel which lasted through two overtimes. The Bobcats finished in first place with a 9-1 record.

Scoring aces for the sophomores were Steve Coe, who topped all conference scorers with 173 points, and Mike Kingery, who finished second in conference scoring with 161 points. Timely aid in scoring also came from Bucky Vivian, who often found himself open under the basket. Talent was not lacking in the guards, as Kirk Page, an expert ball handler, and Mark Ritland held down starting positions. Prospects look good for next year's varsity team as many talented boys will be returning.

With participation on a voluntary basis, the intramural program pits homeroom against homeroom in a year long battle for the coveted intramural championship. The slate of activities contains everything from touch football to horseshoe pitching and a swimming meet. At least one of the intramural activities is taking place at any time throughout the year, and participation is open to any boy wishing to represent his homeroom and not in varsity athletics at the time.

A running tally of points is kept based on the homeroom's placing in each individual event, with the trophy being awarded to the homeroom with the highest number of points.

"Christmas Customs in other Countries" was the topic presented by two Iowa State foreign students to the Girl Reserves during their December meeting. Tom Timm, former Ames High student, gave an account of his trip through South America to the girls at their initiation meeting. He used slides and souvenirs to illustrate his talk.

Other activities carried out under the leadership of Billie Criswell and Jane Coletti, this year's presidents, were Friendship Week, the Teens Against Polio drive, Christmas spray sales, buying presents and delivering them to the residents of the Story

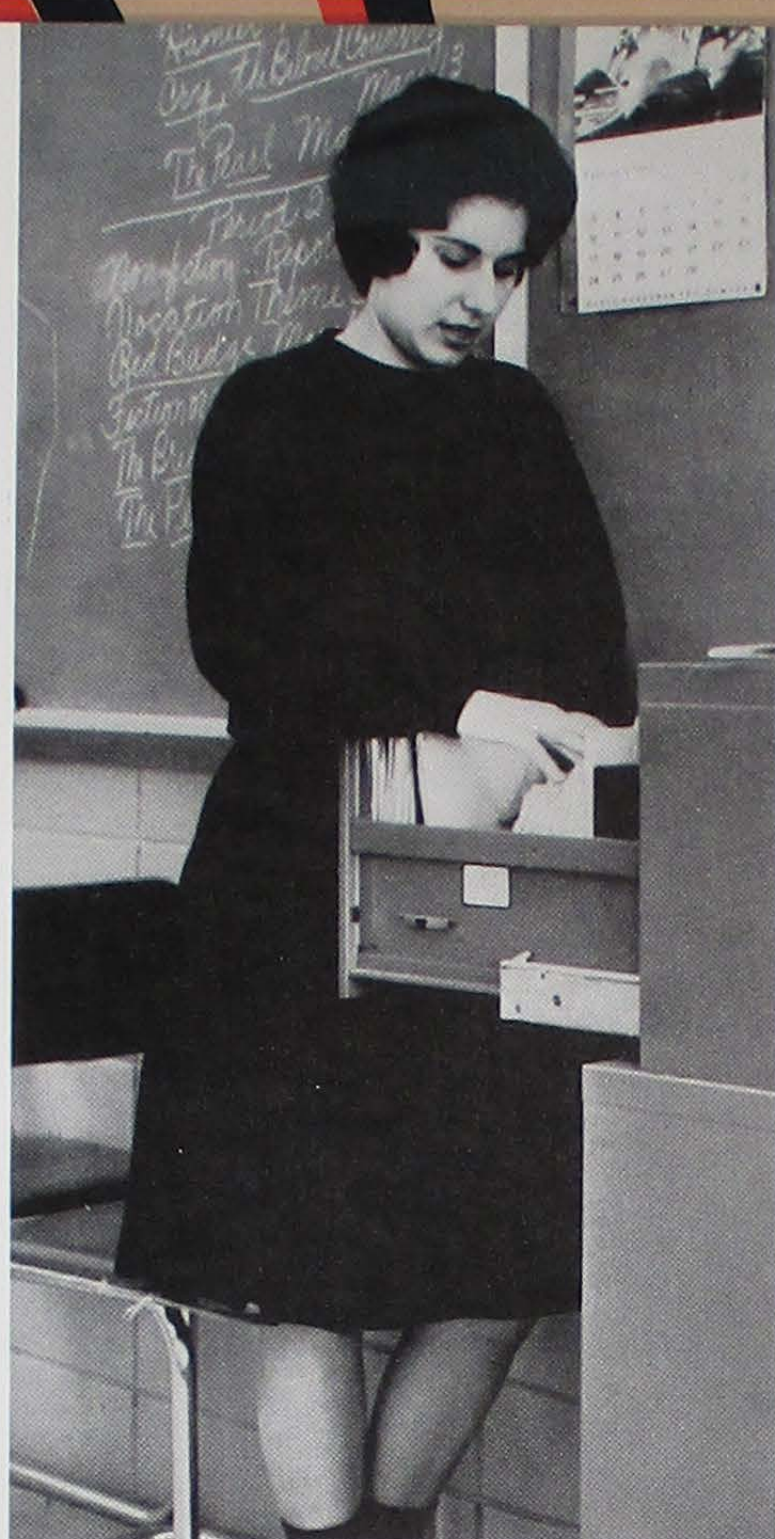

County Home, and a Mother-Daughter Tea. Jane and Billie were assisted in these projects by Libby Roepke, secretary; Judy Christopherson, treasurer; and Barb Squires and Annie Toms, presidents of the representatives.

Boys' Club is the largest boys' organization in the high school. The club engages in various activities designed to be a service to the school and community and to spread the reputation of the school.

Due to the lack of auditorium facilities, the Boys' Club program had to be drastically cut this year. Hobby groups met twice during the year. These groups offered each individual a chance to take part in his favorite hobby or activity.

Hobby group leaders were selected and they organized the programs for their groups. Groups covered a wide variety of interests from athletics to international relations.

Jim Trow and Rick Lloyd were each president of this organization for a semester.

Service projects were carried on normally. In conjunction with the Girl Reserves, the Boys' Club organized Friendship Week and Teens Against Polio. The members of the club also contributed toward the support of a Greek orphan named Philip Koumbis.

REHEARSING for the Junior Town Program, the band plays Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture.

RICHARD DAY conducts the band through a novelty number before its spring concert.

JEAN NOLIN, first chair flutist, was also an accomplished solo pianist for the concert band.

Anyone courageous enough to drag himself to school at 7:45 this fall found the Ames High Marching Band already practicing on the field across from the parking lot. Coming closer an observer could make out the voice of Mr. Day pouncing on some unlucky sophomore who had become nervous and forgotten which was his left foot. By the time of the first football game, however, a miraculous transformation had taken place, and spectators were treated to a scintillating performance by the band.

The end of the football season brought the dreaded auditions for concert band. The cream of the AHS crop of musicians then began a three-day-a-week rehearsal schedule to prepare for appearances later in the year. The director of the concert band was Richard Day and the student president was Rick Lloyd. On the days when rehearsals were not scheduled, Mr. Day met with individual sections to work out the more difficult parts. The band built up a repertoire containing a wide variety of musical selections and climaxed the year's work with a program for the student body and the annual evening concert. In the spring the band attended the Tri-City Band Festival in Webster City.

Students interested in music found the 1962-63 concert band to provide a challenging and very enjoyable experience.

The real "long hairs" at Ames High found a haven in the orchestra directed by Mr. Moberg. This group occupied the band room on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Outstanding members of band were selected to join the string players in forming the orchestra. This year's orchestra was quite small, placing more emphasis on the individual player.

The first public appearance made by this organization was in the form of a pit orchestra for the play. Numbers ranging in style from classical to modern were performed preceding the play and during the intermission.

The orchestra then began work rehearsing for its concert at an all-school assembly. Following this the Ames High Orchestra joined with the other school orchestras in presenting its annual spring concert which has become known for its casual atmosphere in which spectators sit around tables, and popcorn and drinks are served.

In the fall of 1962, talented high school musicians from all over Iowa gathered for the annual All-State Music Festival. The Iowa High School Music Association and the Iowa Music Educators Association sponsored this event, which included an orchestra, band, and chorus.

Auditions were held in early November, climaxing weeks of concentrated practice by the vocal music students, directed by Mr. Cross, and the band and orchestra members, directed by Mr. Day and Mr. Moberg.

Band and orchestra members had individual try-outs, which included selected scales, sight reading, and a solo. Chorus members auditioned in quartets. When the results were announced, thirty-three Ames High musicians found that their long, hard hours of practice were well worth it. Jean Nolin was selected to be one of two All-State accompanists.

Over the Thanksgiving weekend, the All-State musicians from Ames went to the Festival in Des Moines, taking their place among the 1,017 junior virtuosos taking part. Two days of rigorous rehearsals were climaxed by a concert at KRNT Theater. The annual festival was enjoyable, stimulating, and well worth the work necessary to become a part of it.

DURING REHEARSAL, all are intent on the business of perfecting the musical interpretation of director Robert Page.

A Capella Choir, under the direction of Mr. Cross, was made up of Ames High's most accomplished vocal virtuosos. Tryouts were held in the spring, and about 75 students were selected to become members. They met Tuesdays and Thursdays, second period. Don Runyon was elected President, and Jeff Peterson was Vice President.

The major performances of the choir included the Christmas program, Friendship Week, and the Spring Vocal Concert. The choir was responsible for the bulk of the music sung at these programs, being assisted by the other vocal organizations. They performed some quite difficult music including parts of Handel's "Messiah" and several modern numbers.

The Senior members of the choir were entertained by the Rotary Club in the spring, and a reunion was held during Christmas vacation.

Girls' Glee Clubs participated in several programs during the year, including the Christmas program and the spring Vocal Music Concert. Nearly 150 girls participated in the combined organization.

Membership in the Girls' Glee Club was open to any girl who liked to sing. They were divided into two groups: the Junior-Senior Girls' Glee, which met on Monday, and Sophomore Girls' on Tuesday.

One of the most popular vocal groups was the Senior Girls' Sextet. This group was organized five years ago, and made many appearances this year. Members were Carol Rouze, Jane Coletti, Karen Skold, Mary Ellen Bragonier, Pat McCowen, and Karen Nickey.

WHITE SHIRTS AND TIES and a place to stand . . . the curtain goes up. Strong voices sing the serious, comical, and popular songs.

Molding close to one hundred boys into something resembling a vocal group constituted the most difficult task facing Mr. Cross during the year. The result of his work is the Boys' Glee Club. This was divided into two groups; the Junior-Senior Club which met on Monday or on Friday and the Sophomore Boys' Glee which met on Tuesday.

In between pushing each other off the risers, the combined Boys' Glee clubs put on several performances during the year. These included the Christmas program and the spring concert. They sang a great variety of music ranging from religious spirituals to songs from popular musicals. Membership in Boys' Glee is open to any boy who enjoys singing.

Out of the ranks of Boys' Glee came the Senior Boys' Quartet. The members were Rick Lloyd, Dave Peterson, Bill Pyle, and Dave French. They appeared many times during the year.

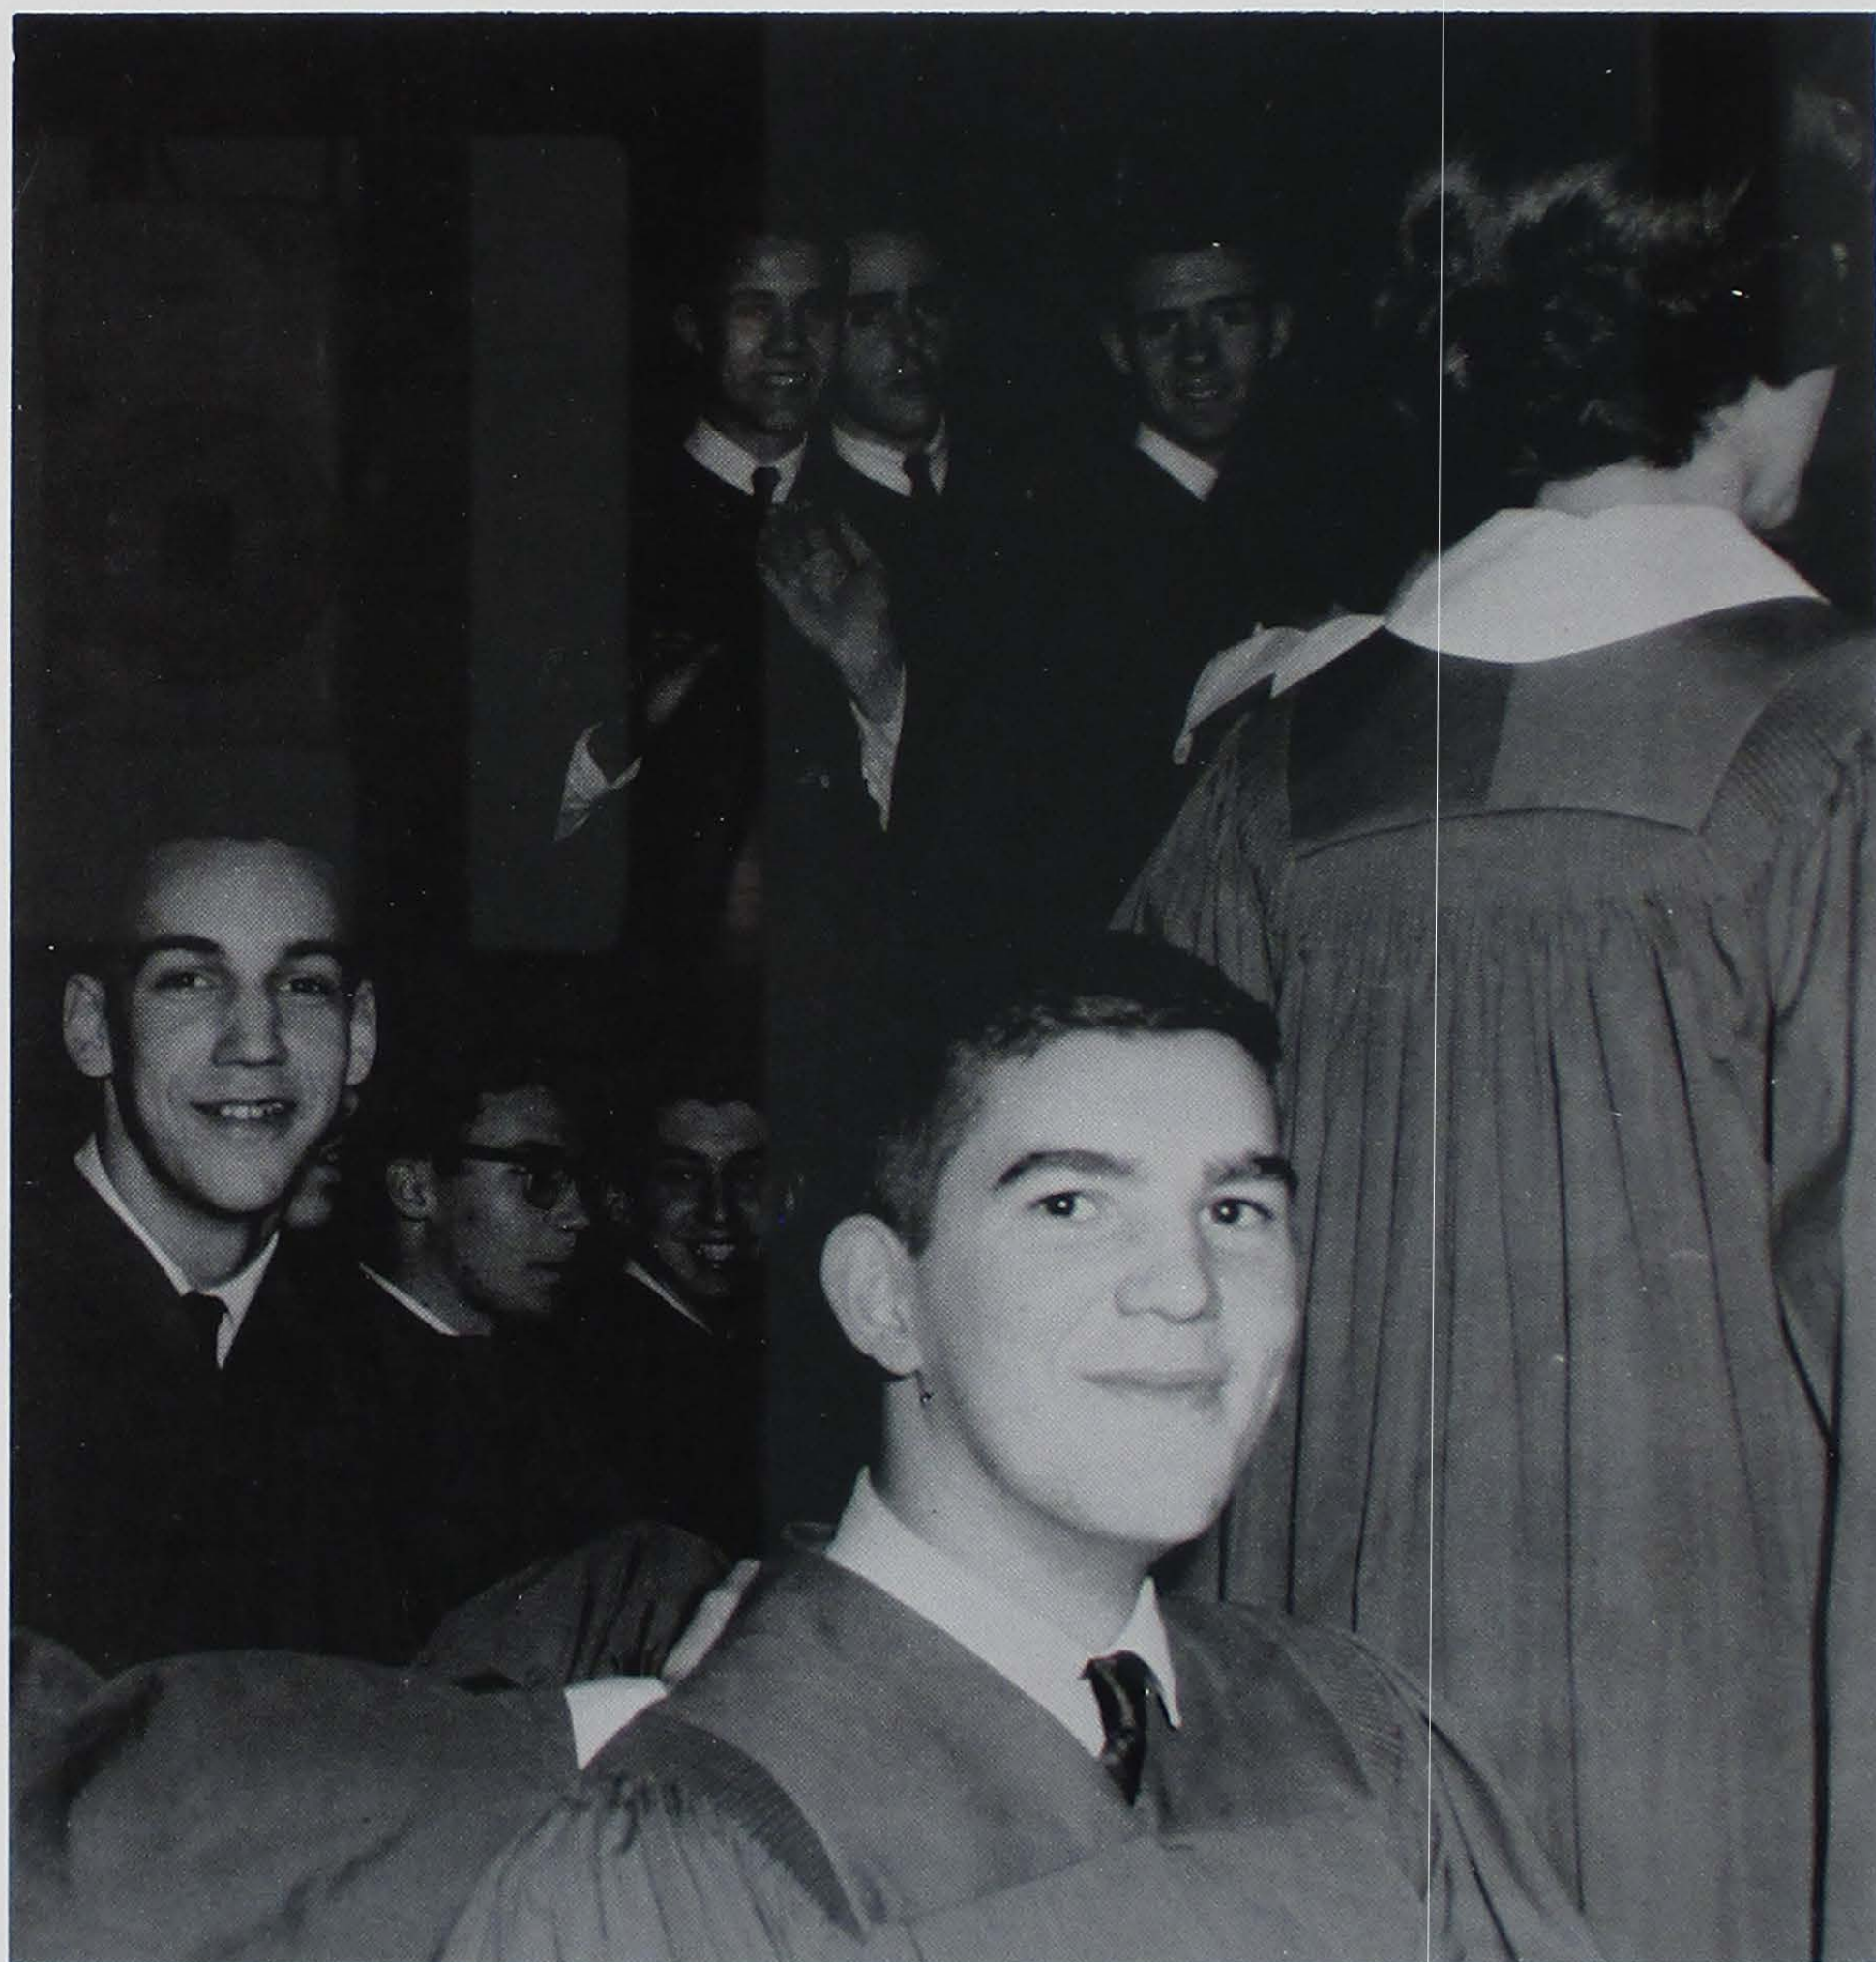

Mixed Choruses Provide Musical

Among the most popular vocal groups at Ames High are the two mixed choruses. Upon the recommendation of the junior high vocal music teachers, Mr. Cross selects the members of the Sophomore Mixed Chorus for the following year. Due to the large number of sophomore members, this chorus was divided into two groups, which met on separate days. As performances drew near, the combined groups met for several practices in which singing positions were assigned and songs were sung.

Performing in combination with the two sections of the Sophomore Mixed Chorus are the members of the Junior-Senior Mixed Chorus. The participants in this group are chosen by Mr. Cross.

The combined Mixed Chorus presents itself to the public several times during the year through the Christmas program and the Spring Vocal Music Concert. A wide variety of numbers are placed in their folios, including religious music, Negro spirituals, and novelty and modern pieces.

BRING A CAMERA into view and someone will wave; focus it, everyone will smile. Why can't singers line up on the risers, stop wasting time, and stop munging up pictures?

MISS CASEWELL, Sue Elbert, arrives at Monkswell Manor and is greeted by proprietor Ralston and guest Christopher Wren.

Strains of the theme song "Three Blind Mice" could be heard as the curtain opened for The Mousetrap, a mystery by Agatha Christie. Monkswell Manor, a newly opened country guest house, was the scene of the action. In scene one Mollie and Giles Ralston, the proprietors, were making final preparations before greeting their anticipated guests. Their guests included Christopher Wren, a tall lad in his twenties, Mrs. Boyle, an elderly, complaining lady, Miss Casewell, a pleasant, easy-to-please woman, and Major Metcalf, a spry, elderly gentleman. Other guests soon arrived and murder begins. A snowstorm, cut telephone wires, and weird actions by some of the guests added mystery to the scene . . . Mrs. Boyle is found strangled. Suspicion pointed in turn towards each of the characters; but a reconstruction of the crime reveals the murderer before the death of his second victim. The explanation of Sergeant Trotters' strange actions is fast and just as exciting as the reason for them, and makes an intriguing ending to a fascinating and suspense filled play.

AT THE HEIGHT OF SUSPENSE, each guest suspects the other of murder. Mr. Wren jeopardizes his safety by acting very strangely.

THE MOUSETRAP CAST—Mr. Paravicine, Mike McLaughlin; Miss Casewell, Sue Elbert; Giles Ralston, John Brown; Mollie Ralston, Mona Berck; Detective Sergeant Trotter, Bill Beck; Mrs. Boyle, Mary Ellen Bragonier; Major Metcalf, Dennis Dowell; Christopher Wren, Jay Villwock.

SCENES, SETS, COSTUMES, and weary after-school hours of rehearsals . . . at times like this, opening night seems years off.

Work and Planning Plus Acting

Although drama is not a full-credit, graded course, most dramatics students agree that it involves almost as much work as an academic subject. This year Advanced and Beginning Dramatics courses were offered all six periods.

The instructors were Mr. Robert Hamilton and the new addition to the Dramatics department, Mrs. S. Anderson. The main requirement of both class divisions of dramatics was a neat and complete notebook containing play summaries, class lecture notes, and various projects concerning such theatrical techniques as scene design and costuming.

During much of the class time students prepared monologues approximately five minutes in length, lecture recitals on a play chosen from an approved list, and short dramatic presentations. During the weeks of play production, Beginning Drama classes helped with construction of scenery and the advanced class students worked on their various crews or helped their instructors with miscellaneous jobs. Participating in drama takes a lot of time and energy, but most participants believe that all the work is worth it.

The goal of most drama students is to become eligible for Palm Club. The requirements for membership in this honorary organization include the earning of 52 points (awarded on the amount of time spent working on productions), two crew-heads, and approximately 12 hours work constructing scenery.

"DOUBLE, DOUBLE TOIL AND TROUBLE; Fire burn and cauldron bubble . . ." says the third witch.

FIREPLACES THAT BURN, stairs that step, and doors that open in the right direction are challenges which Drama Club takes in stride.

Junior Class Presents 'Seven Sisters'

The successful play which the junior class chose to present this year was Seven Sisters, a three-act comedy by Edith Ellis. The well-chosen cast and cooperative crews helped to make this one of the best Ames High School productions ever presented. Seven Sisters is the story of the solution to a widow's problem of getting her daughters married. As the play opens, Mitzi, the problem child of the family, has been sent away to a convent. Soon she returns, proudly stating that she has been expelled and is now all grown up. Her angry mother immediately tells Mitzi that she cannot be grown up until her three older sisters are married. Mitzi, now reduced to the age of fifteen and a half, has abandoned all hope, until one day the multi-named hero of the play, Pierrot, appears. Mitzi had met Pierrot when she was dressed as Pierret at a masquerade ball in Budapest during her brief stay at the convent. Pierrot is shocked to see Mitzi as a little girl and promises to find husbands for her three elder sisters if she gives him three kisses after her sisters are married. Claiming to be Tony, the godson of Mitzi's mother, Pierrot becomes close to the Gyurkovics family and manages to get the three sisters married. Everything is going smoothly until the real Tony appears with official papers as evidence of his identity. He presents them to Pierrot, but the hero skillfully keeps the papers and temporarily gets rid of Tony. Mitzi explains the situation to all, Pierrot asks Pierret to marry him, she agrees to the proposal, and the hero gets his three kisses. Production nights, February 14 and 16, climaxed five weeks of hard work for the actors and crews.

MRS. BAUSKE explains one of the newspaper's basic concepts to one of her second semester classes.

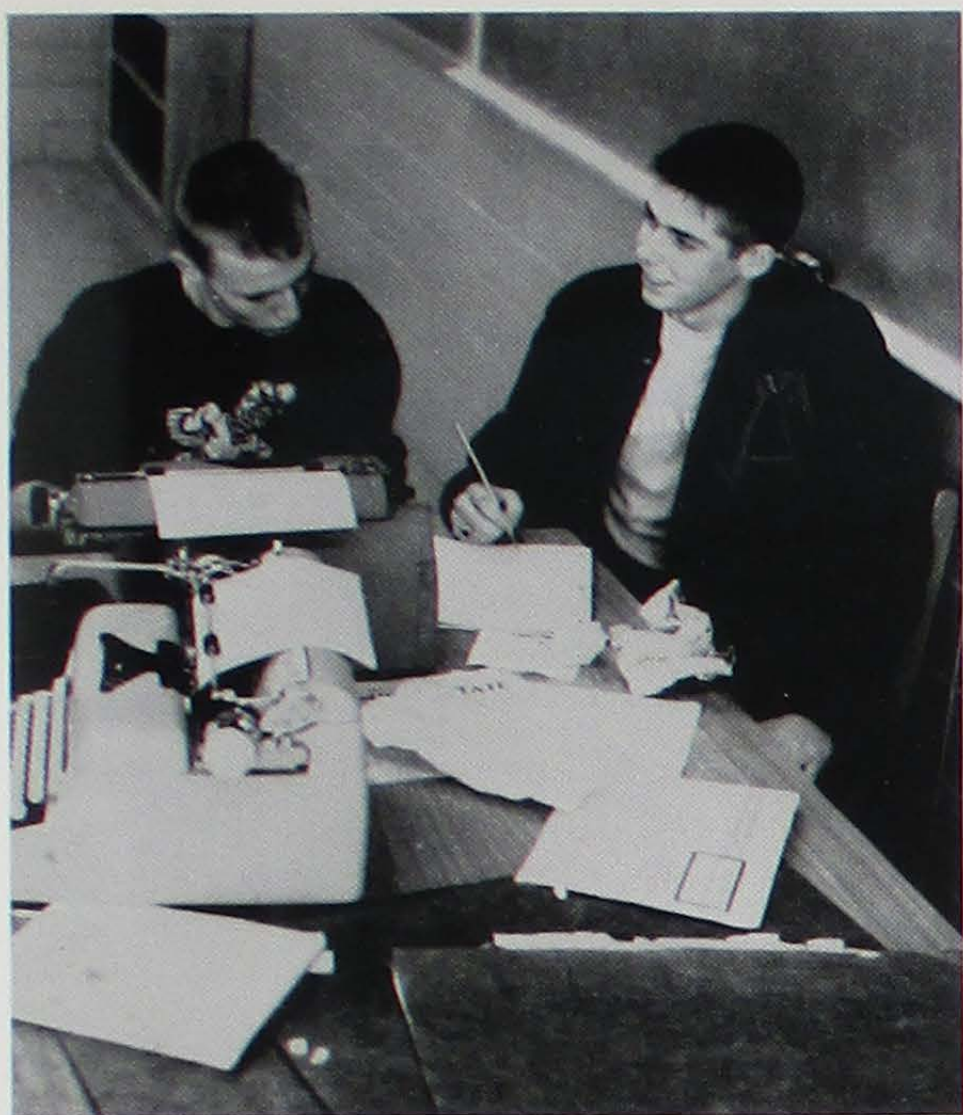

The world is full of news that is gathered by reporters who continually keep their eyes open looking for something new or unusual to write about. In the same manner fifty-four Journalism students have roamed the halls of AHS this year looking for interesting events they could use to write a story. These journalism stories are compiled and used to fill a page of the Ames Daily Tribune every Tuesday. This page is called the Ames High Web.

Journalism is a one semester senior course. The twenty-nine first semester and twenty-five second semester students learned the fundamentals of writing news, feature, and sports stories, editorials, bylines and fillers. Mr. Kenneth Wells, Ames High Athletic Director, talked to the classes about writing sports stories. Mr. Rod Riggs of the Ames Daily Tribune talked to the classes also. The Journalism students toured the Tribune building to see the actual printing of the newspaper.

Each semester the journalism class divided into two Web staffs. Two students were elected by their classmates each semester to serve as editors. Carol Haupt and Jean Nolin were the first semester editors. Karen Skold and Mary Nordskog were elected as second semester editors. Other class members signed up for the first, second, and third choice of positions. The editors used this as the basis of their selection of the staff members.

While one staff was checking to see that all the copy was complete, the other staff was busy planning the next week's paper. Each student was responsible for one story each week. If he didn't receive a specific assignment, it was his duty to find his own topic for a story. Stories were to be written by the end of class on Thursday and be in completed form by Friday. Headline sizes were assigned and each student wrote a headline for his story. Mondays and Fridays were used as lab periods when students worked on their stories. Make-up editors and proofreaders spent part of Tuesday's class period checking the copy and lay-out at the Tribune. On Wednesdays a critical discussion of the week's Web was held.

"7000 LINES?! . . ." Bill breaks the news of an approaching deadline to copywriters Tom and Sandy.

Adds 32 Pages, Rearranges Book

Spirit Staff is a frantic operation. The editorial staff consisting of the art, copy, and editorial departments specializes in assigning their own work to other departments. Bill Strand is the editor and he "beats" anyone who displeases him. Sandy Percival is the copy editor, and she makes the art department write all her copy. Karin Saral and Margy Shepherd of the art staff spend every Spirit period combing their hair, giggling, exchanging secrets, and playing tic-tac-toe; so Bill has to finish their jobs. Assistant editor, Cathy Legvold, is the only one on the staff who does her own work and everyone yells at her. Tom Ukena spends all his time writing copy in which he elects himself to various non-existent honorary positions. Barb Bean schedules all the pictures to be taken and retaken and retaken. Jim Hannum, sports editor, writes vivid, eyewitness accounts of all football and basketball games whether he goes or not. Polly Vinograde assists generally by writing last minute articles, typing apologetic letters to the publishing company, and smiling.

One of the most frustrating aspects of yearbook work is meeting a deadline. No matter how well planned the page order is, how carefully scheduled the pictures are, how fast the typewriters click and how conscientious the editor is, there is always a dreary Saturday session. Everyone comes and talks and eats and listens to records and somehow the work gets done. Then the whole staff breathes a sigh and starts ignoring the next deadline.

Within this confusion have emerged the new ideas for this book; from the happy atmosphere described above have come improved layouts, cheerful, informative (if sarcastic) copy, and artistically intriguing pictures.

THE AD DEPT., Hamp and Debbe, confer with Polly, the general assistant, on ad layouts.

EDITOR BILL Strand gives editor-to-be, Cathy Legvold, a few pointers on the frustrating task of compiling an index.

SCRATCH PAD members judge submitted pieces of literature for publication: Mrs. Thompson, S. Feamster, S. Armstrong, M. Walkup, C. Kirk, P. Routh.

Budding novelists and poets find a publisher for their works in the Scratch Pad. Put out annually by the Creative Writing Club, this magazine consists of original poetry, essays and prose fiction. Besides offering prospective authors a chance for self-expression, the Scratch Pad, Ames High's only literary publication, allows the entire student body to enjoy the talents of its creative members.

The Scratch Pad staff works all year gathering material from English teachers and students, selecting articles to be published, and typing up chosen pieces.

Last spring Mary Nordskog, a member of the Scratch Pad staff, was recognized for her poetic abilities at the annual honors assembly. There it was announced that her poem, "Night Train to Nowhere," was chosen to appear in the National Anthology of High School Poetry.

CONNIE BAILEY and editor Sandy Feamster proofread contributions to the Scratch Pad.

Scratch Pad Adds to Literary World;

LOIS FIELDS puts a reference book back into the stacks. Library Club members help keep the library functioning.

One of the most useful and beautiful additions to Ames High School this year was the school library. A marvelous selection of books, colorful lounging chairs and various other articles of furniture induced study and provided an atmosphere of comfort and relaxation to all Ames High students during noon hours and study halls.

Twenty-eight high school students participated in library club to aid Mrs. Elizabeth Dickinson, school librarian. Library Club met every other Wednesday of the school year during the noon hour in Room 213-2 to discuss matters concerning the library. It is required of all Library Club members to work in the library twice a week aiding students in finding books, checking them out, returning them, and paying fines. Harold Nichols led Library Club as president and Katy Jo Rigg acted as secretary.

The average Ames High School student is oriented to the library and its Dewey Decimal System as a sophomore. However, it is during the junior year that an individual puts his knowledge to use and discovers many new uses of the library in composing a vocational research paper. As seniors, the library is put to good use in writing research papers and reading informative college catalogs, which help college-bound students reach decisions.

Treasurers of school organizations are chosen by the advisors or sponsors for the organization rather than by popular election. Student treasurers are responsible for collecting money, making out receipts, planning a tentative budget, and making financial reports. The Student Council treasurer also serves as head of the money-making committee. Junior and senior class treasurers serve on Junior Executive Council and Senior Senate. The treasurer of the drama department is chosen from the Palm Club membership. Other treasurers serve on councils or cabinets for their respective organizations. All treasurers turn their cash books and records over to Miss Mary McNally, general treasurer for Ames High School, once each month to have them checked. Carol Kirk was Miss McNally's assistant this year.

Some organizations handle several thousand dollars and some handle only a very small amount. The student assistant in the vocational educational department handles the most money during a year's time, and the Spirit business manager handles the next largest amount.

Firesquad Members Organize Students

During those cold winter fire drills, the superior-looking gentlemen holding open the doors and discreetly remaining inside were the members of the Firesquad.

This organization is distinguished mainly by the Firesquad passes that won't get you into anything, and the annual picnic. A year's accumulation of fine money is used to attempt the nearly impossible task of filling 30 bottomless pits.

The serious function of the Firesquad is enforcement of the rules and policies of AHS. They also supervise the fire drills. Students caught violating school rules were reported to the firesquad faculty sponsors. Members pulled duty on specified posts every-other week. Those failing to be on their posts were fined accordingly. Meetings were held once a week under the leadership of Mr. Ripp and Mr. Wood. Membership is based on faculty recommendation, and the final selection is left to the members.

FHA OFFICERS—Miss Trout, M. Grabau, K. Speer, R. Getty, M. Workman, J. Templeton, J. Christopherson, D. Childs.

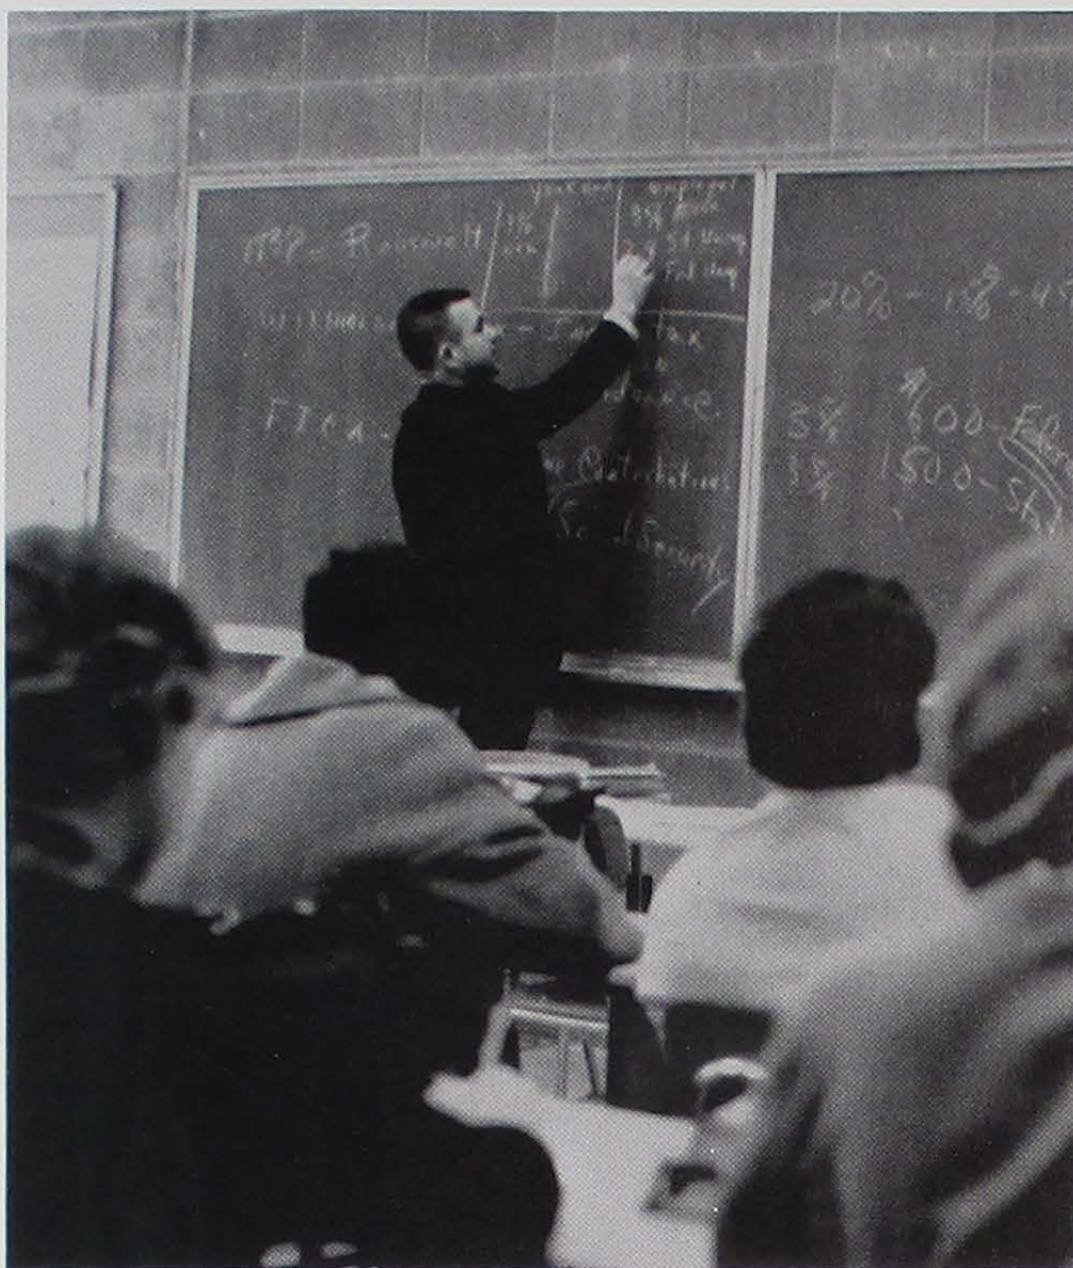

Pot luck suppers, a swimming party, and talks by guest speakers highlighted the year for the Future Homemakers of America. An exchange was held with the Nevada FHA at Ames during the year. Meetings were held in the home economics room twice each month. The club membership was open to girls interested in home economics.

Bake sales and selling Christmas tapes were two FHA moneymaking projects this year. The club chartered a bus to Oskaloosa for the district FHA meeting. Diane Childs was district vice president this year. Next year the Ames club will choose the district president from among its members.

Several homemaking students accompanied Miss Betty Trout, homemaking instructor, to Des Moines to purchase dishes, silverware, and other essentials needed to equip the brand new home economics department. Four sparkling kitchens and many new sewing machines are special features in this department.

Martha Grabau was elected president of the local club this year. Other officers were Janice Templeton, vice president; Judy Christopherson, secretary-treasurer; Kathy Spear, music chairman; Rita Getty, historian; and Marilyn Workman, parliamentarian.

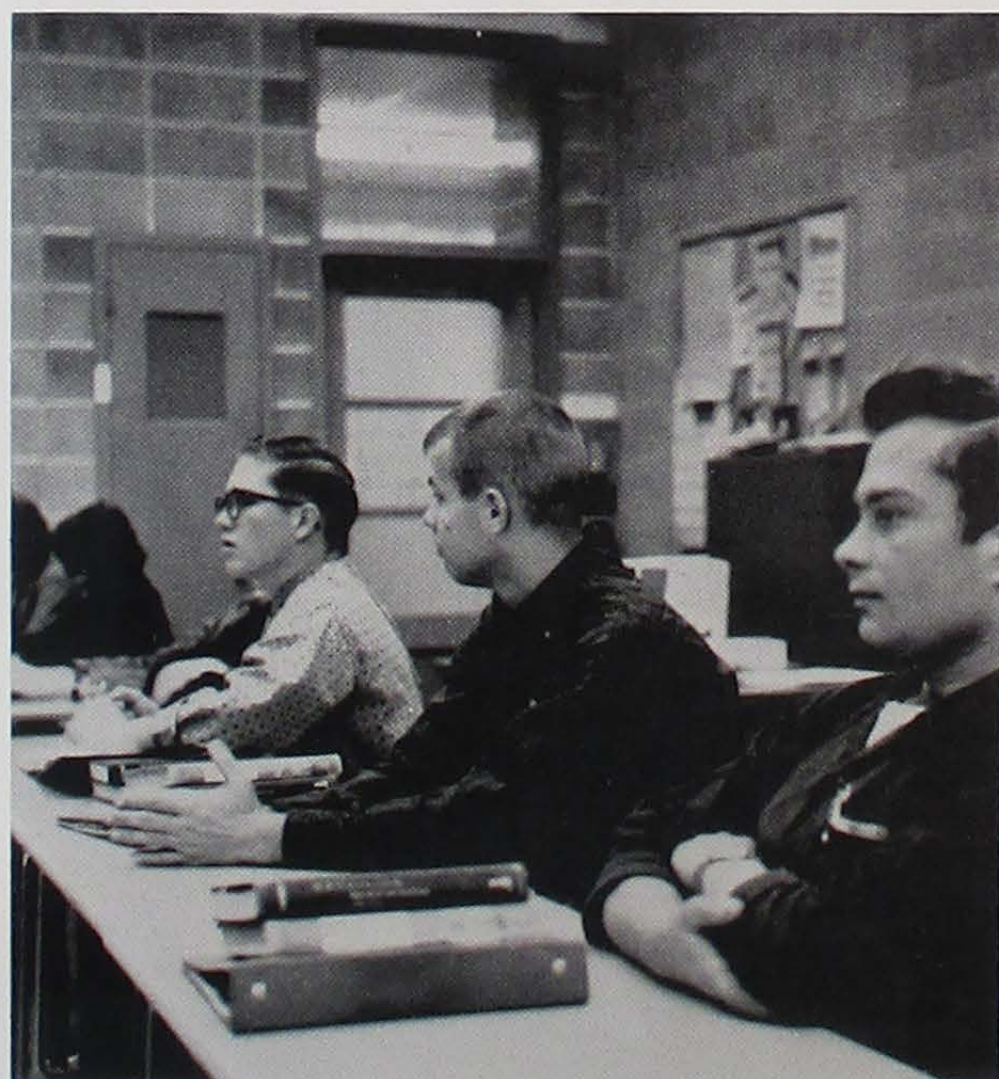

MR. OVERTURF discusses employment conditions to DECA members.

Careers in Business, Homemaking

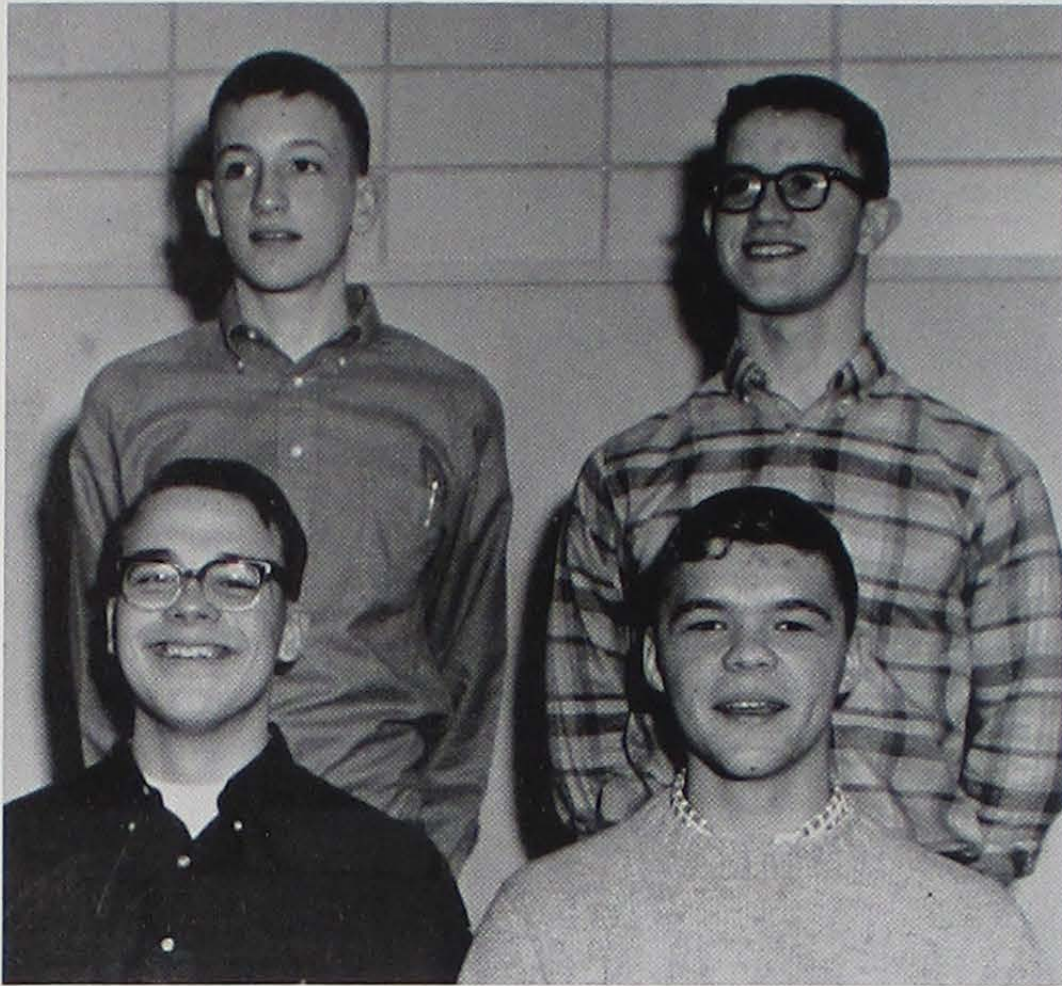

Distributive Education Clubs of America try to develop in their members leadership in the field of distributing information on career opportunities in the field of commercial distribution. DECA has only been in existence for five years. Mr. James Overturf is the club sponsor.

DECA membership is open to any student who is enrolled in cooperative distributive education. Distributive education is for senior students who spend half of the school day at a retail or wholesale business establishment receiving "on-the-job" training. Training areas include ladies ready-to-wear, men's furnishings, hardware, jewelry, variety store, appliance, shoes, radio and television sales, wholesale electrical supplies, and wholesale plumbing supplies. Distributive education students are required to take a course in distributive practice. "On-the-job" trainees receive two credits per semester for a weekly minimum of fifteen hours of work.

WORK EXPERIENCE STUDENTS are eligible for membership in DECA.

French, German, Latin, Spanish Clubs

All the Language Clubs were extremely active this year. French Club, under the leadership of Ann Wilson, president, invited all French students, past and present, to the Mardi Gras. A bake sale was held to earn money for this extravaganza, as it truly was, for a play. "Leave It To Suzanne" was produced after five weeks of hard labor.

Christmas caroling in German was one activity in which German Club participated. Miss Von Whitch was sent flowers on Valentines day, compliments of the club. Spring activities included a talent show in which all entries were related to Germany, and earlier in the year a guest speaker was invited to expound on German history.

In May, the Latin Club held their traditional, sensational Roman banquet. Clad in togas, transplanted students reverted to the Roman riot of feasting on roast pig.

Each month a speaker talked to the Spanish Club on Mexican and Spanish culture. The human interest aspect of these countries was emphasized. Two of these speakers were Marie Rubio, who demonstrated her native dances, and Mrs. Wallin, of the Guatemala shop, who showed slides and typical articles of clothing. In May, an outdoor Fiesta was held as a climax to the year's activities.

The combined clubs held an International Christmas Party which was the high point of activity. Each club sang songs in its language and all joined in singing "Jingle Bells" in their respective languages simultaneously.

DEBATER JANET Wildman furthers the negative's cause. Noontime meetings combined interesting arguments and sporadic lunches.

Debate, Science Seminar Offer

Many organizations spend a good deal of their time arguing, but the only one that does it on purpose is the debate club. Instead of arguing with their parents, teachers, and friends, the debaters do research on a specified topic and then vent the accumulated frustrations of several weeks upon their opponents. The object is to find fault in as much of what the other team is saying as possible and then turn this against them until they are thoroughly dejected, befuddled, humiliated, and disgraced.

Besides bolstering the ego of the winner, debate also has many intellectual rewards. The debater becomes well informed on some current controversy and also is introduced to the invaluable art of presenting a well organized and water-tight argument.

The topic this year was "Resolved: that the United States should promote a Common Market for the Western Hemisphere." The club met presumably twice a week under the sponsorship of Mr. Cole. They also participated in several interscholastic debates throughout the year.

Science Seminar, another academic club, is geared to the student with an interest in learning and practicing science. It offers an opportunity to attend lectures, conduct related experiments, and work on individual projects. This year university professors lectured on astronomy and bio-chemistry; equipment and instruction were provided in these fields. Each member also worked on a project of his own choice to earn the $\frac{1}{4}$ credit which Science Seminar offers. These projects, which could be in any field, were rated mostly "acceptable" and occasionally "superior."

DR. HEARN of the ISU Bio-Chemistry Department gave a series of lectures to Science Seminar.

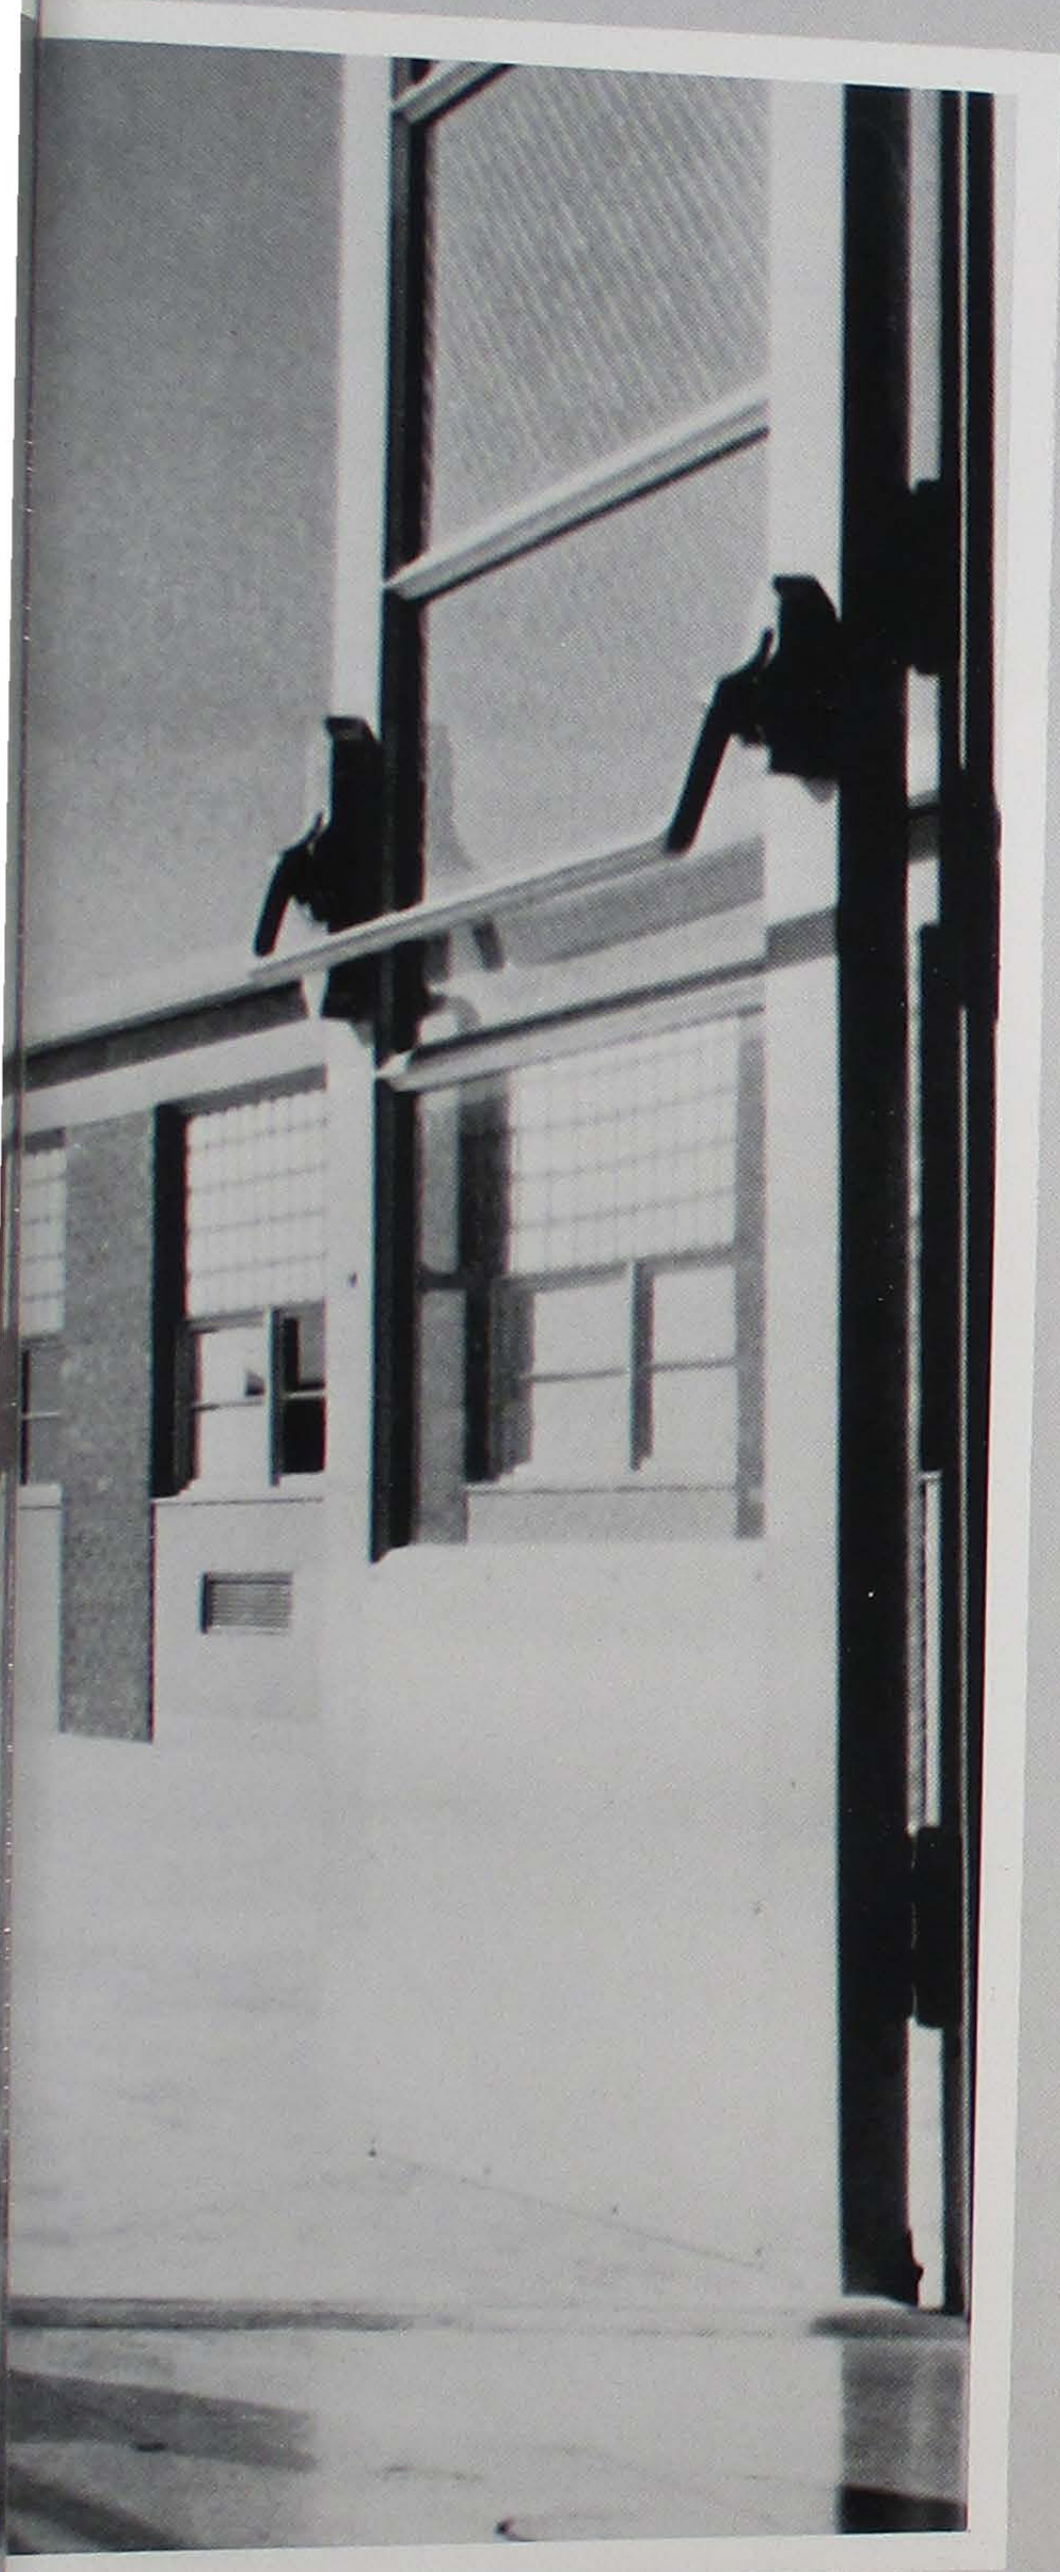

SCIENCE SEMINAR met Tuesday evenings at 7:30. Topics for programs were interestingly diversified.

Opportunities for Specific Interests

ADVISOR DON COLE and members of debate listen intently as a speaker weaves his traps.

Students

Throughout the year the atmosphere at the school changes with the personalities of its thousand students. Semester weeks are characterized by a tension pitched as high as that of a tournament game; and each day various class groups are scurrying around finishing assignments, research papers, and projects or cramming themselves full of quiz facts.

Thus, the year progresses with its colorful characters playing various roles. Let it never be said that students find no time for fun; walk down any hall and a joke or its aftermath will greet your ears. In the spring the campus is covered with groups of students dotting its rolling hills. Following are the student divisions:

- Student Council
- Student Body Presidents
- Senior Senate
- Seniors
- Junior Executive Council
- Junior Homerooms
- Sophomores

Student Council Organizes Hall

JIM HANNUM was elected as second semester Student Body President in January. He presided at all council and executive meetings.

After weeks of campaign meetings and a week of campaigning last spring, Archie Greene was elected by the Student Body to serve as first semester Student Body President. Her installation was held during the first assembly of the '62-'63 school year. Homerooms elected presidents to serve as representatives to student council. Other student council officers for this semester were Bob Beaty, vice president; Hamp Tisdale, secretary; Jim Hannum, treasurer; and Mary Nordskog, social chairman for the year.

Campaign meetings began again during Christmas vacation and lasted until January 11 when Jim Hannum was elected as second semester president. The other officers this semester were Hamp Tisdale, vice president; Dick Gibson, secretary; Bill Easton, treasurer; and Jack Lasche and Bob Beaty, parliamentarians. Mr. Ritland is the sponsor.

As one of its major assignments, Student Council organized all of the Homecoming activities: election of the queen and presentation of the first major dance of the school year.

Other special events carried out by the council this year were a very successful Back-to-School Night, placing "yield" signs at 16th and Ridgewood, placing guide posts in the parking lot, work on the constitution revision, the hall monitor system, and the installation of pop machines in the basement of the second unit.

PRESIDENT ARCHIE GREENE was elected during the final quarter of her junior year. She is the third girl to be President at Ames High.

COUNCIL MEMBERS wait for a during-school meeting to begin; meetings rotate from period to period each week.

Fun and hard work presented themselves to 240 graduating members of the 1963 Senior Class. Graduation announcements and name cards were ordered, cap and gown measurements taken, ticket sales for the senior class play promoted, and baccalaureate and graduation exercises organized. During senior week, seniors were finally rewarded for their hard work. While diligent sophomores and juniors sat in classrooms and took semester tests, the class of '63 took part in five days of relaxation and fun. The annual all-day party at the Ames Country Club, including swimming, golf, and movies, was supplemented by numerous private dances and open-houses. Graduation brought all events to a climax as every senior felt a sense of pride and accomplishment on receiving his diploma.

Senior Senate was again the organizing body for the Senior Class as each of the eight senior home-rooms was represented by a senator. Mike Allen led the Senior Class as President, aided by Hamp Tisdale, Vice President, Karin Saral, Secretary, and Sandy Feamster, Treasurer. Mr. Ritland was the sponsor.

SPRING AND GRADUATION seem a long way off during this December meeting, but President Mike Allen is already ordering graduation announcements and preparing for commencement.

AND REGRETFULLY throws the carton away. Thus the noon hour is drunk away.

JEFF COX, as Junior Class President, organized money-making projects for the Prom.

Cox, Nordskog,

The splendor which characterizes the Junior-Senior Prom marks the culmination of a year of hard work by the Junior Class. They were responsible for not only the prom itself, but also the fund-raising activities before it.

Undertaking the difficult task of organizing the juniors were the members of the Junior Executive Council. This consisted of the class officers and members elected from unrepresented homerooms. They met on Monday of each week under the leadership of President Jeff Cox and Mr. MacBride, the faculty sponsor.

The first section of the juniors' master money-making plans to be put into effect was the sale of Homecoming Mums. This successful venture was handled for the most part by members of Junior Exec. But the carwash at Central required the help of all juniors. As they sat at home drying off from sporadic water fights that had erupted, the members of the Council were already busy with plans for the annual leaf rakes. Thus the tempo for the year was set with the juniors constantly busy at projects including the student directory, the class play, and finally the Prom.

Advertising

Salesmanship is the lifeblood of a buying world, and getting the "younger generation" price conscious is the advertiser's job. In the past years merchants have begun to realize that the student holds one side of the family purse strings. In numerous surveys the advertiser was surprised to note that the high schooler controls several thousand dollars a year; and that in a high school the size of Ames, the student body has influence over several hundred thousand dollars of yearly purchases.

It's the high school student who patronizes many of the following industries:

- School supplies
- Books, paperbacks
- Ice cream products
- Gas stations
- Clothing stores
- Grocery stores
- Restaurants.

The piggy banks of today will become the automobiles, homes, and banks of the future!

And to the Spirit of Ames High best wishes for success to all the Seniors

Feb. Deadline Ends 6 Months' Work

At the end of deadline week we finally looked back on the six months of fourth periods we called "Spirit." It's not true to say that nothing went right, because we were never sure how events should have happened. Horizontal pictures, vertical spaces; no copy and four hundred words needed; lost pages, wrong page numbers; and mixed up orders for Saturday hamburgers and cokes; these trivial problems combined with personality conflicts and foibles such as forgetfulness are recorded for you in the preceding pages: confusing copy, unbalanced layouts, pictures rescheduled for the fourth time. Now that you have your book, why don't you sign ours.

AROUND DEADLINE time, the staff's most severe punishment is to stand in a corner and type.

THE LAST PAGES are signed, checked, and sent in, and Mrs. Lutz can smile again.

An abstract geometric design on a beige background. The design consists of several thick, intersecting lines. A prominent red line forms a large 'V' shape, pointing downwards. This red line is bordered by a thick black line. Other black lines intersect the red line and each other, creating a complex web of geometric shapes. The number '63' is printed in a bold, black, sans-serif font within one of the white triangular areas created by the lines.
